Watson Says Bill, as Is,
Approximates Hoover Wish—Only 34 Per Cent of Old Rates Changed.

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER.
WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—
The fate of the tariff bill, believed to hinge on one or two votes, will be decided in the senate on Friday at 2 p. m.

This day and hour was set by unanimous consent of all senators today after it was found most of them could be present at that time.

"I think we will win but it is very close," was the terse comment of Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader.

Democrats were making no predictions, but strangely enough they were looking to Pennsylvania's two republican senators, Reed and Grundy, to help defeat the bill. Both still were in the doubtful column tonight. Reed is expected to make his position known tomorrow on the floor.

Chairman Hawley, of the house ways and means committee, announced in the house that he would call up the conference report on the measure on Saturday if the senate takes affirmative action.

The first test will come on a motion to recommit the measure to conference. Senator Blaine, republican independent, Wisconsin, entered such a motion today with a protest that the conference had disregarded all scientific bases in arriving at the duty on cheese.

Blaine and Senator Smoot, republican, Utah, clashed heatedly over this statement. The former said he conferred with Smoot yesterday and was given to understand he would be invited to attend a conference with tariff commission experts on the cheese item.

The conference was held without him, but Smoot denied he promised or understood Blaine wanted to attend.

Arguing for adoption of the conference report, Senator Watson asserted the bill as it now stands "very nearly approximates the desire expressed by the president to have a revision of agricultural rates and for the benefit only of those industries which have been suffering because of foreign competition."

He disputed arguments that the measure represented a general revision, contending only 34 per cent of the thousands of named commodities had been given increased or reduced rates.

Senator McCulloch, republican, Ohio, also spoke for the bill, saying he would vote for it, however, only because of the flexible provision which would permit the president and tariff commission to correct any mistakes made by the congress.

Declaring the delay in passage of the bill had caused in some measure the business depression existing today, the Ohioan said if the bill were defeated the uncertainty would continue because there would be agitation for another tariff revision.

Several times today there were cries of "vote" and at one time the senate was on the verge of a final roll call.
No senator was on his feet to speak and Vice President Curtis put the question.

The time for a vote was agreed upon only after half a dozen sena-

TAYLOR ALLIANCE
DENIED BY MOORE

Candidate for Mayor As-sails James L. Key for "Mud Slinging."

Denial of the charge that he is allied with City Clerk Walter C.
Taylor, who was convicted recently of bribery, was voiced Tuesday night by Councilman Wiley L. Moore, candidate for mayor, at Adair school in an address in which he attacked ex-Mayor James L. Key for "mud-slinging." Key did not speak at any meeting, being represented at Adair school by J. P. Womack, who declared that "Mr. Key has not fired his big gun yet."

Councilman Moore charged that Key "is using Atlanta Life," a weekly publication, in his campaign of "mud-slinging," and asserted that "Key knows his attacks upon me are untrue." Moore declared that he "hates graft and corruption as much as anyone," and offered to aid the investigation of jury tampering in the case of the late Mayor Key.

The signing of a pact by the four mayoralty candidates to eliminate a runner primary if no one man gets a majority vote, and announcement
of an agreement on a similar pledge
in the race for recorder of the city and division Tuesday featured developments in city politics.

The signing of a pact by the four mayoralty candidates to eliminate a runner primary if no one man gets a majority vote, and announcement
of an agreement on a similar pledge
in the race for recorder of the city
and division Tuesday featured developments in city politics.

At the Adair school, Womack announced that he will talk over the radio on Monday and Tuesday nights, and urged all voters to tune in.
Womack's address was short. He declared that he personally has never taken an interest in politics except to vote for those candidates he thought best.

The race for city offices is expected to get warmer tonight when rival candidates hold three mass meetings in widely scattered parts of Atlanta. Friends of ex-Mayor Key A.
Boykin failed to obtain necessary funds from the county commission.

Four candidates for recorder of the second division, will sign an agreement today to avoid a runner primary in the event no candidate receives a majority. This agreement was reached at the insistence of John L. Cone, who made the proposal at several mass meetings.

In an address at the Adair school in the tenth ward, Councilman Moore defied Key to prove his charges, and asserted that he has "nothing to do with the graft between Walter Taylor and ex-Mayor Key." Moore charged Key with mud-slinging, but declared that "I have shoulders that can carry all Key can put on them, and then have room for more."

"I am not aligned with Taylor or any other faction or clique any more than Key is," he told his audience.
"You can put us both under a test and if I do not come out from under the microscope cleaner than Key I will get out of this race. . . . and I'm not perfect."

Moore said that no one is more interested than he in ridding the city of grafters. He told the audience that when the graft investigation began, he sent Solicitor-General John A.
Boykin word that he was at his service at any time that he was needed to give information in regard to the finance committee.

Referring to Boykin's request to the county commission for more money to pursue the inquiry into jury tampering in connection with the graft cases, Moore said "If Mr. Boykin does not get the money from the county

King Proves Adept at Politics by Dividing Op-

BY ALEXANDER HURTIG,

BUCHAREST, Rumania, June 10.
(UN)—Friends of King Carol II moved steadily today to consolidate him in the power he assumed by a whirlwind maneuver over the weekend.

Wedge after wedge was driven into the ranks of the liberal party, the only faction which objected to Carol's return from Paris and his accession to the throne. The party, hitherto a strong combination of really conservative forces throughout the country, apparently was split between the followers of Vintila Bratianu and his nephew, Georg.

Harassed on account of his opposition to Carol, the elder Bratianu tried three times today to resign his party leadership but failed because the executive council felt such action would harm the party's authority.

Georg Bratianu, though a university professor and unskilled in politics as compared with his famous uncle, led the forces favoring Carol as king. Ousted from the party yesterday, he rallied all liberal organizations in Transylvania to his support.

A report circulated late in the day that the liberals as a whole had decided to swing to Carol's aid, but this was denied tonight by Georg. He said, however, he believed the party eventually would vindicate him in his stand.

Carol, while benefiting by the activity of his friends, moved cautiously in both the political and domestic fields. It was announced that his coronation probably would be delayed a year, during which time he apparently hoped to win Princess Helene to a renewal of her married life by an-nulling her divorce.

The passage of 48 hours without selection of a new cabinet caused rumors of many kinds, but Carol was still represented as hoping for a fortunate outcome of the balloting.

Another delegation supported by Mr. Gaines favored the portables for the Jerome Jones school, relating the necessity for additional housing space.

$3,001,639 BUDGET
FOR YEAR ADOPTED
BY SCHOOL BOARD

Sheet Is Short of Requirements by $260,000,
But Board Expects Council's Aid Next December.

Approval of a budget calling for expenditure of $3,001,639 for the first 11 months of this year, and a request that council provide about $30,000 for absorption of several pressing obligations featured the June meeting of the board of education Tuesday afternoon.

The approved finance sheet is approximately $260,000 short of enough money to operate the school system during December, but it has been indicated that council will take steps to provide that sum and probably carry it over until next year. The paper will be dispatched to Mayor I. N. Ragsdale for his approval.

Included among the list of items which council was asked to provide in supplementary allocations are about $20,000 for payments on additional land for Haygood and the McLendon schools; repair of the Inman Park school, and erection of a two-room portable at the Jerome Jones school.

W. W. Gaines, of the third ward and chairman of the current expenditures committee of the board, asked that the board approve allocation of the $125,000 set up in the October finance sheet for school purposes into various salary accounts, thus providing for payment of salaries through November.

Administrative officials of the school system hold that there is not enough money to pay the December salaries.

Inman Park School.
A strong delegation of citizens headed by Councilman W. Paul Carpenter, of the ninth ward, insisted that some action be taken to remedy the bad physical condition of the Inman Park school, and also to make the institution a six grade school instead of a three-grade one, as at present.

Administrative officials will investigate the feasibility of extending the number of classrooms in which the state contends, Mrs. French bought the weapon with which she killed Gar-mon, now is an employee of the state highway department on duty at a Louisville. He was summoned by telegraph
Tuesday and expected to be on hand this morning. Colley, lieutenant of the Southern railway police, is at Hot Springs, Ark. He, too, is expected to be in court today.

Mrs. Rogers Summoned.
Mrs. Rogers, who, according to Assistant Solicitor-General John H.
Hudson, is the woman over whom Garmon and Mrs. French quarreled during the several days preceding February 11, when the woman shot and killed Garmon when he called at her East Ninth street home shortly before 4 o'clock that morning, was summoned along with a dozen other witnesses, chief among them being the elder Mrs. Garmon.

According to Mr. Hudson, Mrs.
Garmon will testify as she did at the coroner's inquest into her son's death when she declared that Mrs. French had called her on the telephone and threatened Garmon's life.

Most of the jurors excused Tuesday declared themselves opposed to capital punishment. In interrogating the members of the various panels, Assistant Solicitor-General Ed A. Stephens asked each if they were opposed to the death penalty. Only those who announced themselves unopposed were considered.

pany.

M. M. LINER SINKS TANKER IN CRASH

Boats Collide Off Boston in Thick Fog—Few Passengers Injured.

BOSTON, June 10.—(AP)—The steamship Fairfax, of the Merchants & Miners Transportation Co., carrying 71 passengers from Boston to Philadelphia and Baltimore, collided in a fog tonight with an oil tanker at sea off Scituate, Mass. Several passengers were reported badly injured and the tankers, whose identity was not determined immediately, was reported sunk.

News of the accident was received at the offices of the line here but details were lacking several hours after the collision.

The steamship Gloucester, of the same line and following a similar course as the Fairfax, was in the vicinity at the time of the collision and went to the aid of the two ships.

She reported to the offices of the company that the passengers were being transferred to her and that she would bring them back to Boston.

On the basis of the meager reports received, ambulances, physicians and nurses were summoned to the pier and arrangements were made to transfer the injured to a hospital.

An almost impenetrable, pea-soup fog blanketed the coast and it was believed hours would be required to make the trip into the harbor. From the pier here it was impossible to see more than a few feet out over the water.

The Fairfax, a steamship of 5,600 gross tons, was making her first trip of the season. She was under the command of Captain Archibald Brooks, and carried a crew of 70 men. She sailed from pier here at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. Fog then hung over the harbor and she moved out slowly. The point at which the collision was reported to have occurred is about 27 miles out in Massachusetts bay.

Captain Brooks reported to the company shortly after the collision that he had anchored off Scituate and his message was followed some time later by one from Captain A. C.
Ranting, of the Gloucester, reporting that he was on the scene. The Gloucester, carrying 16 passengers, sailed from Boston about three hours after the Fairfax.

No report was received as to what had happened to the tanker or her crew.

Mountaineers Killed.

VIENNA, Austria, June 10.—(AP)— Five mountaineers have been killed as the result of a sudden storm in the "Gessene" mountains, a deep defile 12 miles in length. Three bathers were drowned during the progress of the storm and three persons lost their lives in road accidents.

Jury Selected To Try Gar- mon's Slayer After Six Panels Had Been Ex- hausted.

With Mrs. Ruth Rogers—law-over whom, the state contends, caused John S. Garmon to go to his death—and Mrs. C. W. Garmon, the slain man's mother, as the state's star witnesses, taking of testimony in the Peggy French murder trial is to be begun in the superior court of Judge
G. H. Howard this morning.

A jury was selected Tuesday morning, six panels of prospective jurors having been exhausted before 12 men were chosen. Delay in taking of testimony was necessitated by the absence of Felton S. Webb and J. M.
Colley, two of the state's witness es.

Webb, former clerk in a downtown hardware store in which the state contends, Mrs. French bought the weapon with which she killed Gar-
mon, now is an employee of the state highway department on duty at a Louisville. He was summoned by telegraph
Tuesday and expected to be on hand

3,000,000 SEEN IN STATE CENSUS

150 Counties Show Total of 2,677,917—No Figures From Savannah.

Predictions of census workers that Georgia's 1930 population would reach 3,000,000 were strengthened Tuesday with an unofficial tabulation by The Associated Press of returns from 150 of the state's 161 counties.

The count for the 150 counties in the tabulation was 2,677,917, compared with 2,640,652 in the same counties in 1920.

The increase is 37,265.
The tabulation was based almost entirely on preliminary returns, and included no figures from the Savannah district. Census authorities at Savannah have not yet supplied returns from any of the 11 counties in that district. However, the count includes first returns from all other counties in the state.

In 1920, the Savannah district had a population of 221,404.
Census workers are relying on the difference in the preliminary count and the official tabulation and a possible increase in the 11 counties in the Savannah district to swell this state's 1930 population to 3,000,000.

The increase in the 150 counties, small as it is, came despite losses of population in 96 of the tabulated counties.

Many of the decreases were surprisingly heavy. The population of Jasper county for example, decreased from 15,292 in 1920 to 14,888. On the other hand, Bibb county in the same district increased its population from 71,304 to 77,093.

All the counties in which are located the state's large cities increased their population. Fulton leading with 317,254 compared with 232,967 in 1920.

The counts in Fulton, DeKalb and all counties in the Gainesville area are official.

Several counties still have not supplied complete preliminary figures.
One or two small districts in each still are not tabulated.

Creating of many new counties since 1920 naturally cut into the population of the mother counties.
An example of this is Lamar county with a population of 9,745. Monroe and Pike counties, from which Lamar was created, lost heavily.

Pike's dropping to 10,850 from 21,
212 and Monroe's to 11,600 from 20, 123.

The same situation exists in the Gainesville area.
Rural sections report virtually no unemployment.

The unemployment figures for Fulton and DeKalb counties have not yet been received.

Rewards of $55,000 Post-

Half World Challenge Accepted.

TRIBUNE PROMISES
MANY CASUALTIES

Man Who Can Identify Slayer Is Found—Police Withhold Results of Investigation.

CHICAGO, June 10.—(AP)—The press of Chicago tonight united in declaring a war to the finish on gangsters.

After posting rewards totaling $55,000 for apprehension of the slayer of Alfred "Jake" Lingle, Tribune reporter, the leading dailies called the killing a "challenge to the press," and editorially announced their acceptance.

The Chicago Herald and Examiner announced a $25,000 reward.
The Tribune had offered $25,000 and $5,000 had been posted by the Chicago Evening Post. In addition, $10,000 is expected to be offered by the Chicago Press Association.

"It Is War."
"It is war," the Tribune said.
"There will be casualties, but that is to be expected, it being war. All the Tribune has the support of all the other Chicago newspapers. . . . It is a common cause not only for the newspapers, but for all the citizens of Chicago."

The meaning, the paper said, is plain. "It was committed in repentance," it declared, "and in attempt at intimidation. Mr. Lingle was a police reporter and an exceptionally well-informed one. What made him valuable to his newspaper marked him as dangerous to the killers."

"It was war," the Tribune said.
"There will be casualties, but that is to be expected, it being war. All the Tribune has the support of all the other Chicago newspapers. . . . It is a common cause not only for the newspapers, but for all the citizens of Chicago."

Concluding the Tribune said: "The challenge of crime to the community must be accepted. It has been given with bravado. It is accepted and we'll see what the consequences are to be. Justice will make a fight or it will abdicate."

Declaring the killing of Lingle will result in "the mantle of mystery being torn from the entire structure of Chicago's gangland," the Herald and Examiner said the city's citizens are

McLendon Opens War On City Pool Rooms

Declaring he will seek the support of religious and civic organizations in an effort to banish pool rooms, "the breeding places for 90 per cent of crime in Atlanta," Councilman W. Chester McLendon Tuesday announced he will introduce a measure Monday in council which if approved will virtually ban pool rooms. The paper is so drastic that it would not permit sale of edible, soft drinks or any other article in connection with the pool room. It also would bar chairs and all those not actually engaged in playing in the game would be subject to arrest. Another provision is that sitting rooms or other places where prospective customers could be made comfortable adjacent to the playing room would be prohibited. Violation of the law would be punishable by fines not exceeding $100 or 30 days in the stockade, either or both in the discretion of the recorder.

FENNER AND BEANE EXPANDS SERVICE

Fenner & Beane, stock and commodity brokers, announces that Robert A. McCord, of Macon, Ga., will serve as the resident partner in Atlanta.

Mr. McCord is a native of Rome and has resided in Macon since childhood, where he has long been an outstanding leader in civic affairs. He is chairman of the board of the Continental Bank of Macon and a large real estate owner in that city.

Mr. McCord's entry is in line with the firm's policy of stationing resident partners in strategic locations. Resident partners are now stationed at Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans and New York.

January 1 last the firm's communications service was reorganized, when the use of relay telephone wires was abandoned. Now all their offices are central offices and are served by direct trunk telephone wires over which the fastest possible service is had.

From these central offices a system of leased long-distance telephone wires radiates to surrounding cities and towns. In each case a direct connected cleared telephone wire, carrying a local telephone number, is used. In this way traders in the smaller towns are served with the same efficiency as obtains in the larger cities.

Miss Blair Re-elected As Georgia Historian

Miss Ruth Blair, state historian, was re-elected for a six-year term by members of the state historical commission in annual session at the capitol Tuesday.

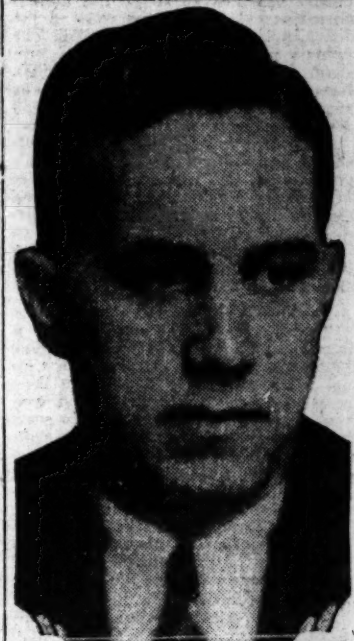

Miss Blair's re-election, which was unanimous, will assure the completion of important research among the state's early records now being conducted by her, it was said.

The state department of history and archives was created by the 1918 legislature for the primary purpose of concentrating manuscript records.

The department recently received the former A. G. Rhodes mansion on Peachtree street for a permanent home. The building was the gift of heirs of the late Mr. Rhodes to the state.

Edgar Chambers Awarded Medal At Law School

One of the highest honors attainable in scholastic circles—that of being adjudged first honor graduate of the law school of Emory University—has been achieved by Edgar Chambers, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar

EDGAR CHAMBERS, JR.

Chambers, who was awarded that distinction Tuesday upon the receipt of his degree from the school as bachelor of laws.

In finishing as first honor student of the law school, Mr. Chambers won the Samuel P. Williams honor medal, having had the highest scholastic average of any student in the class during the entire three-year course. The medal is donated by former Dean Williams.

Mr. Chambers, who is 24 years of age, has won many student honors during his studies at the University School for Boys, from which he was graduated in 1924, and later at Emory, having been the recipient of a degree of bachelor of philosophy from Emory University upon his graduation in 1928. The present award as honor student of the law school comes as a reward for his arduous endeavors in his studies in jurisprudence, much of which time was put in during summer vacations.

He is well known among the younger social set in Atlanta, having married Miss Laura Candler, daughter of Asa G. Candler, Jr., about two years ago. He has one son, Edgar, III. Mr. Chambers for the past year has been associated with the law firm of Underwood, Haas & Gambrell, in the Candler building, and expects to continue his connection with that firm.

Walter Andrews, B. P. O. E. Ruler, Given New Title

Walter P. Andrews, Atlanta's grand exalted ruler of the B. P. O. E. Elks, Tuesday was given a brand new title following a busy itinerary last week in various sections of the middle west.

It's Colonel Andrews, of the Blue Grass, by appointment of his excellency, the governor of Kentucky.

The honor was conferred upon Mr. Andrews Monday night, it became known upon the opening of the Kentucky Elks Association convention Monday night. In addition, the retiring president of the Kentucky Elks presented Colonel Andrews on behalf of the order in that state with a beautiful chest of solid silver. He also invited Colonel Andrews to occupy a seat in his box at the 1931 Kentucky Derby.

Thus it was that Mr. Andrews became one of that vaunted list of Kentucky colonels which includes, among others easily remembered, Irvin G. Cobb and Bo McMillin; and as such is entitled to grow a snow white goatee and flowing mustaches, wear a big black sombrero, point with pride and view with alarm—except that it is only on rare occasions that even a Kentucky colonel may view with alarm.

Included in Mr. Andrews' itinerary of the week were visits to Cincinnati, Indianapolis, LaFayette, Ind.; Chicago and Ashland. He will leave Atlanta Saturday for Monticello, Va., where he will attend the public observance of the birth of the flag, and will deliver the Flag Day oration at this celebration, which will be held in the home of Thomas Jefferson under the auspices of the Virginia State Elks Association.

Following his Monticello trip, Colonel Andrews will return to this city, where he will remain until July 1, when he leaves for Atlanta, Ga., where he will preside over the 66th meeting of the grand lodge.

Youth, Beyond Depth, Is Rescued by Chum

Venturing beyond his depth in the swimming pool at Grant Park, Johnny Vaughn, young grand school pupil, Tuesday escaped drowning when he was rescued by a chum, Albert Rawls, who pulled him to safety and applied resuscitative measures.

Vaughn, who lives at 643 Gillette avenue, found himself exhausted in water too deep for him and cried out for help. Young Rawls, of 1430 Belmont avenue, swam to him, struggled for a safe grasp on his companion and towed him to safety.

Woman Indicted.

Mrs. Sarah Arnold, of a Boulevard address, Tuesday was indicted by the Fulton county grand jury on three charges of receiving stolen goods from her husband, M. E. Arnold, who pleaded guilty to burglary last week and received five to ten years on the chain.

MEMORIAL TWO-THIRDS DONE, LUKEMAN SAYS

Sculptor Looking Forward to Completion of Work, He States in Letter.

Declaring that in the face of "so many stories" which have been disseminated about the virtually abandoned project for carving a gigantic Confederate memorial on Stone Mountain he desires the people of Atlanta and the rest of the south to know the exact status of the memorial, Augustus Lukeman, New York sculptor, in a letter received by The Constitution Tuesday, declares that the memorial is two-thirds complete and that he is looking forward to completing the work "under the letter and spirit of my contract."

His letter follows: "So many stories have come to my ears in reference to Stone Mountain Confederate memorial that I would appreciate a little space in your valuable paper in order to make clear to the citizens of Atlanta and the rest of the south the exact status of the memorial at the present time. "I was called in to complete this memorial after another sculptor had proved himself incapable of carrying it out. He had destroyed models for which the memorial association had paid him $185,000, and on taking charge all that I found besides some buildings was a partially finished head carved on the surface of the mountain where the granite was eroded and full of fissure that would not have lasted 20 years.

"Accordingly, I was not only compelled to redesign the entire memorial, but also in order to reensure a lasting memorial to remove that work which had been done under what is known as sap granite.

"I worked steadily on the models and the memorial for over two years, during which time I received $32,500. This included not only payments for my time but also costs which later amounted to some $7,900.

"The model was taken by me and which included my payments has cost the memorial association $152,000 to date, is two-thirds finished and consists of three equestrian figures, each 120 feet in height. My predecessor worked for 18 months, spent $185,000, contracted a debt of $22,000 which the association must pay on his departure left one unfinished head carved on the sap granite.

"For over two years no work has been done, the models are completed and at the present time the association owes me about $17,000, but as I realize there are no funds I've been willing to wait and look forward to completing the work under the letter and spirit of my contract.

"I do not feel that politics should play a part in a sculptor's profession. Reluctantly I undertook the job when someone else failed and had proved himself unfitted by temperament, if for no other reason, of finishing it. I have given the association the best that is in me; I continued work after the funds were all used up and when the association was in my debt because I felt there was a moral issue involved. Now I'm not asking for what is due me in the way of money; I am only endeavoring to let the people who have been so generous know my position in the matter. I regret that the circulation of so many false reports (apparently by an organized cabal) makes this statement necessary."

Prawn Fishermen Are Facing Battle

The controversy between salt water sport fishermen and commercial prawn fishermen will come to light again Thursday in dual meetings of the state board of game and fish to be held at Brunswick and Savannah Thursday.

The Brunswick meeting will be held at 8:30 o'clock in the morning and that at Savannah at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Fishermen who catch salt water game fish for sport are seeking to bar prawn boats from the sounds and inland waters of the coast for a period of several years in an effort to restore the stock of game fish. They contend that the prawn fishermen have depleted the game fish supply by their commercial fishing. Millions of small game fish are caught in the nets cast by prawn fishermen and allowed to rot.

The more to bar prawn fishing in the inland waters is countered by the prawn fishermen, who stress the value of their industry to the state.

The state law which bars prawn boats from inland waters from March 1 to August 1 has not improved the situation much, the sport fishermen say.

'Canned Lingo' Will Be Taught At Oglethorpe

On the assumption that "it" as in cornbread, should be rolled and not gently slurred, and determined that dialect shall vanish from usage among good students, the English department of Oglethorpe University plans to inaugurate on July 18 a summer school at which phonograph records prepared at the University of Wisconsin will form the criterion of speech for school teachers attending the six weeks' course, which will be continued among undergraduate classes next winter.

The "canned lingo" of the University of Wisconsin has been recorded on the basis of pronouncements given in seven dictionaries, and the Georgians endeavoring to learn "English as she is spoke" thereby probably will have to find a happy medium of enunciation. The announcement of the forthcoming summer school declares that there will be no effort to teach the king's English, on the excuse that "we are democratic." Nor will Boston English be the standard, "for we are southerners." The main idea, as gleaned from the announcement, is for the students to adapt themselves to "neutral good English" that will pass without comment anywhere as the speech of educated gentlemen.

HOOVER SIGNS TEXTILE FOUNDATION MEASURE

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P)—A broad step toward the development and improvement of the textile industry of the nation was taken today when President Hoover signed a bill creating the "textile foundation."

The foundation, a corporate body, may accept nearly $2,000,000 from the Textile Alliance, Incorporated, of New York, to expend for scientific and economic research for the benefit and development of the textile industry and its allied branches.

It will consist of the secretaries of commerce and agriculture and three persons familiar with the industry to be named by the chief executive. They will serve without compensation. The foundation is a result of the World War. During that period the American government found itself without sufficient importations of wool, flax and other raw materials of the textile industry, in addition to dyes. The British government placed an embargo on numerous textile commodities and it was impossible to obtain dyes from Germany.

The Textile Alliance, Inc. of New York, a non-profit organization, was organized in 1914 to protect mill owners and operators from unfair abuses, unjust and unlawful exactions, and deceptions in the manufacture of mill supplies. In obtaining wool and dyes during the war period there accumulated profits which were not disposed of because of a treasury department effort, to collect a tax on them from Germany.

A definite settlement was demanded by the officers of the alliance, and an agreement was reached whereby the federal government would begin a friendly suit against the alliance to obtain a settlement in court. No officer of the government is authorized to make such a settlement under the existing law.

The dyes were obtained far below cost through the alliance.

To keep from breaking the American dye market the alliance did not pass on this reduction in selling to American customers, thus accumulating the fund now to be disposed of.

National Experts To Attend Dental Meeting Here Today

DR. R. BOYD BOGLE, President American Dental Association.

Attended by a group of some of the most widely known experts in the profession, including both national and international figures, the Georgia State Dental Society will convene this morning at the Ansley hotel for its sixtieth annual meeting, which will continue with morning, afternoon and night sessions through Friday.

Addresses by Dr. R. Boyd Bogle, president of the American Dental Association; Dr. L. Pierce Anthony, of Philadelphia, editor of Dental Cosmos; Dr. Sherman L. Davis, of Indianapolis, internationally known for his research work on the relation of diet to tooth development and preservation, and a number of other prominent speakers, will feature the business end of the program, while radio programs, luncheon, the annual banquet and a trap shoot will provide diversion for the members and their guests.

The convention will be called to order at 9:30 this morning by Dr. W. B. Childs, of Macon, president of the state society, after the invocation by the Rev. Marvin A. Franklin, pastor of the Park Street Methodist church. The president's annual address will precede presentation of distinguished guests, following which Dr. Bogle, of the national association, will extend that organization's greetings.

Dr. Anthony to Speak.

One of the high spots in today's morning session will be the address of Dr. Anthony, who, as editor of the Dental Cosmos, will speak on "The History of Southern Dentistry." Dr. Anthony is thoroughly familiar with the history of both national and southern dentistry, and its progress and development, and in his address he is expected to set forth the fact that dentistry has exerted a profound influence on the progress of the profession throughout the rest of the country.

This morning's session will be brought to a close with an address by Dr. James A. Blue, of Birmingham, on "The X-Ray in Dentistry," which will be illustrated by projection machine and slides. Following Dr. Blue's lecture the convention will adjourn for luncheon.

During the afternoon session, which will begin at 12:30, the speakers will attack on all. In large measure, the hope of the community for effective warfare against its enemies lies in the possession of courageous and outspoken newspapers. Chicago has such a press and the present occasion seems to us one on which it should demonstrate that it is united."

The Daily News said: "Gangland today has routed against it every agency of law-abiding citizenry—civil organizations as well as governmental authorities."

Speaking in behalf of the Evening American Managing Editor James Bickett, stated: "We will join wholeheartedly with other Chicago newspapers in the campaign to put a stop to gang depredations."

Police were able to find one man who said he saw the actual killing and got a good look at the assassin. He was Clarke Applegate, sportsman and former owner of a string of race horses, also en route to the Washington Park track. Applegate said that Lingle was about 10 feet ahead of him.

"He and I were good friends, but I didn't see his face and didn't know it was he," Applegate stated. "A man stepped up behind him and shot him in the back of the head. I ran after the assassin, but he was too fast for me. I saw a policeman chasing him, so I went back and joined my wife."

Indication that progress of the investigation would not be made public at once came from Coroner Bundesen.

"We believe," he said, "that we simply must wait for the murder. It is my opinion that we must guard against exposing our evidence. We hope to work up a case that is unsatisfactory. For that reason we propose to work in secret. We shall use the best brains available and the best police methods known."

The slaying of Lingle, who for 18 years reported crime and gang news for The Tribune, was ascribed by Commissioner of Police Russell to a private grudge while others held it was due to gangland spite.

The assassination injected vigor into a hearing before the city council police committee on charges that two detectives efficient in the harassing of gangsters had been transferred to ineffective duties on complaint of gangsters.

Aldermen James B. Bowler and Arthur F. Albert charged at the hearing that some policemen were in league with gangsters and permitting "wholesale slaughter."

"Drury not How" (the two detectives) were transferred to hoodlums every hour of the day, while in the Leg men are shot dead," declared Alderman Albert.

"That's not so," shouted Chief of Detectives John Stege.

Police rounded up more than a score of criminals in their search for Lingle's assassin, but did not subscribe to the theory held by the reporter's friends that he had been put on the spot by gangsters for his investigation of the 10 recent spectacular slayings before his made the 11th in the last few days.

Police Commissioner William Russell held the manner of the slaying proved it was not perpetrated by hoodlums. He was inclined to think the slaying had a personal grudge against Lingle.

Another agency reported hard at work for solution to the crime was the "secret six" committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce. The committee was organized to combat crime after a wave of gang killings.

Bankers of Georgia Feted in New York

NEW YORK, June 10.—(P)—Two hundred members of the Georgia State Bankers' Association arrived in New York today aboard the city of Birmingham from Savannah. They will continue their thirty-ninth annual convention here, finishing business that could not be completed in the boat because most of the bankers became sea sick.

John M. Graham, vice president of the association and vice president of the National City Bank of Rome, said business was reasonably good. Mr. Graham will be installed as president of the association tomorrow, succeeding Gordon J. Groover, vice president of the Southern National Bank of Georgia.

The Central Hanover Bank & Trust Company entertained the delegation, a number of whom were accompanied by their wives, at dinner. Afterward they attended the theater. The delegation returns to Savannah on the City of Birmingham tomorrow night.

House Approves Bryan Memorial

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(P)—Erection in the national capital of a memorial to William Jennings Bryan by the William Jennings Bryan Memorial Association would be authorized under a senate resolution adopted today by the house and sent to the president.

The memorial probably will be a tower with carillon bells. The association has been engaged for several years in raising funds for it.

In addition to Dr. Bogle, prominent dentists who will attend the convention are Dr. Carl W. Hoffer, of Nashville, authority on balanced occlusion; Dr. L. Pierce Anthony, editor, Dental Cosmos, Philadelphia; Dr. James A. Blue, of Philadelphia, dental economist; Dr. Justin D. Towner, Memphis, authority on the treatment of pyorrhea; Dr. Sherman Davis, Indianapolis, long known research expert; and Dr. James A. Blue, of Birmingham, X-ray specialist.

Officers of the Georgia society are: Dr. W. B. Childs, of Macon, president; Dr. Klatt R. Armstrong, of Atlanta, president-elect; Dr. R. F. Sullivan, Savannah, vice president; Dr. E. K. Venable, of Atlanta, secretary.

All Prospective Taylor Jurors Called in Probe

Summoning the 75 prospective jurors drawn for service at the trial of Walter C. Taylor, Solicitor-General John A. Boykin Tuesday reopened the grand jury investigation into alleged tampering with the Taylor jury, announcing that the balance of the week would be required to complete this one phase of the investigation.

Six persons, including three license inspectors in the city clerk's office, already are under indictment for alleged tampering with the jury. Taylor, convicted of bribery, is under sentence to the chain gang and at present is free pending appeal to the supreme court.

Between 15 and 20 of the prospective jurors were questioned by the grand jury Tuesday afternoon in special session after the inquestorial body had completed the handling of the routine business of the day. Another session is to be held today.

"We are going to question all of those summoned for service in the Taylor case," Mr. Boykin said. "This alone will require several days. In addition we have other leads which investigators are following up on and there may be other evidence ready when we complete the task at hand."

The grand jury last week submitted a request to the Fulton county board for an appropriation of $3,000 to carry on the investigation. The request was referred to Chairman Edward H. Inman, of the finance commission, and Chairman Walter Stewart, of the police committee, but no recommendations have yet been made to the full board.

"Of course every operation of the government costs money," Mr. Boykin said when asked about the appropriation. "It is badly needed but we carrying on as best we can without it. The investigation may suffer if it is not forthcoming but everything that can be done without the appropriation will be done."

Mr. Boykin explained Tuesday that he and his assistant, J. Walter LeCraw, would give their undivided attention to the activities of the grand jury throughout the week, leaving the handling of all court matters to Assistant Solicitor-General Ed A. Stephens and John Hudson.

Marriage Follows On Divorce's Heels

RENO, Nev., June 10.—(P)—Going directly to his prospective bride's apartment from the courtroom where his second wife, Mrs. Maud H. Bush, had been granted a divorce, Irving T. Bush, creator of the Brooklyn Termini, yesterday was married to Miss Marion Spore, of New York.

Bush in a secretly filed divorce suit charged that Mrs. Bush continually nagged him and that he was unable to please her. Mrs. Bush, who was granted the divorce on a cross-petition filed two weeks ago, charged that her husband often took long trips without informing her where he was going. He refused to permit her to attend her son's graduation at Oxford, the petition alleged, and once had refused to accompany her home from Europe.

Mr. Bush indicated today he would return with his bride to New York immediately, on pressing business matters.

Bush has been thrice married. In 1891 he married Miss Belle Barlow at Ridgewood, Mich. His second wife, to whom he was married at Lakewood, N. J., in 1907, was the widow of Francis Beard.

SERVING MANY BUSINESSES

Experience of large fleet owners reveals the unusual reliability and economy of the new Ford

A SIGNIFICANT TRIBUTE to the value of the new Ford is found in its increasing use by Federal, state and city governments and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most instances, the Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests of every factor that contributes to good performance—speed, power, safety, comfort, low cost of operation and up-keep, reliability and long life.

Prominent among the companies using the Ford are the Associated Companies of the Bell System, Armour and Company, The Borden Company, Continental Baking Corporation, Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, General Electric Company, Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Kellogg Company, Knickerbocker Ice Company, Morton Salt Company, Pillsbury Flour Mills Company, The Procter & Gamble Company, and Swift & Company.

Each of these companies uses a large number of Ford cars and trucks.

The Associated Companies of the Bell System use more than eight thousand.

Modern business moves at a fast pace and it needs the Ford. Daily, in countless ways and places, it helps to speed the production and delivery of the world's goods and extend the useful service of men and companies.

Constant, steady operation over many thousands of miles emphasizes the advantages of the sound design of the Ford car, its high quality of materials, and accuracy in manufacturing. Beneath its graceful lines and beautiful colors there is a high degree of mechanical excellence.

An example of the value built into the Ford is the use of more than twenty ball and roller bearings. They are hidden within the car and you may never see them. Yet they play an important part in satisfactory, economical performance. Their function is similar to the jewels of a fine watch.

Throughout the Ford chassis, a ball or roller bearing is used at every place where it is needed to reduce friction and wear and give smooth, reliable mechanical operation.

At many points, as on the transmission counter-shaft, clutch release, fan and pump shaft, and front drive shaft, these ball and roller bearings are used where less costly types of bearings might be considered adequate.

Additional instances of the high quality built into the Ford are the extensive use of steel forgings, fully enclosed four-wheel brakes, Rustless Steel, four Houdaille double-acting hydraulic shock absorbers, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves, torque-tube drive, three-quarter floating rear axle, and the Triplex shatter-proof glass windshield.

The Ford policy has always been to use the best possible material for each part and then, through large production, give it to the public at low cost.

Georgia's Crops Improved, State Farm Expert Reports

Only in Northern Half of State Has Cotton Been Retarded, E. C. Westbrook Declares.

With the exception of retardation of growth of cotton in the northern half of the state because of unusually cool weather, all major Georgia crops are well on the way toward improvement, E. C. Westbrook, cotton and tobacco specialist of the state college of agriculture, declared Tuesday.

With proper care, the expert said, the cotton growers in the upper portion of the state may turn what appears at present to be adverse crop conditions into favorable prospects, while growers of tobacco, corn, small grain, sweet potatoes, peanuts and watermelons have little to fear in the way of damage to those crops. "The cool weather which has prevailed during the last two weeks," Mr. Westbrook asserted, "not only has checked the growth of cotton in north Georgia but is largely responsible for the ragged appearance of the leaves. A good many farmers have the opinion that some kind of insects have been helping to keep the leaves from growing and have attributed the ragged condition of the leaves to this cause. While in a few instances this spring we have observed insects on the leaves, the damage so far by these insects has been restricted to small areas. Even in the areas where these pests have occurred this year, the damage has not been severe enough to justify the use of sulphur or nicotine dust."

Hot Weather Needed.
Most of the cotton, he pointed out, is now large enough to overcome a great deal of adverse weather conditions, and in his opinion a spell of hot weather at this time would do much to help cotton overcome its ragged condition. Almost anything which can be done to stimulate growth will add to the improvement of the crop, he said.

"Frequent and thorough cultivation is very beneficial in helping to keep the cotton in a thrifty condition," Mr. Westbrook advised. "A wide dressing of nitrate of soda, or some other quick-acting fertilizer, will greatly stimulate quick growth and rapid fruiting. A side dressing of from 100 to 150 pounds of quick-acting nitrogen given in the form of 200 to 450 pounds of seed cotton in the various experiments conducted, it has been proven to be a profitable practice and it also helps to mature a big crop ahead of the boll weevil."

"There appears to be a smaller number of boll weevils at this time than for the same period last year. Where weevils have appeared, if the cotton is mopped with sweetened poison, practically all of the wintered weevils can be killed. A mixture of one pound of calcium arsenate, one gallon of black strap molasses and one gallon of water is very effective. After the cotton has reached some size, the dust method is more effective than the sweetened mixture."

"The stands of cotton as a whole are good and if the weather conditions are anything like normal we can see no reason why Georgia should not be able to produce a good crop this year."

Woman Solon Wants Doughboys 'Dolled Up'

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—The army doughboys would be furnished blue dress uniforms free of charge under a bill introduced today by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, republican, Massachusetts. The measure would authorize $1,000,000 for the uniforms. Mrs. Rogers said enlisted men were entitled to one dress uniform without cost. Under the present system the soldiers pay for them.

The following day he will jump to Antofagasta, then will go to Santiago for a three-day stay before taking off for Buenos Aires. U. N. C. Honors Martha Berry With Doctorate

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., June 10.—(AP)—"As a reward for your meritorious service in educational fields, and recognition of your position as educator and administrator, I bestow upon you the rank of doctor of laws," said Dr. Chase, president of North Carolina University today in bestowing upon Miss Martha Berry, Georgia, the rank of doctor of laws. The first such honor ever accorded by this university to a woman.

Armed with an ideal, Miss Berry has lifted to the heights thousands of poor mountain boys and girls, thus achieving a more lasting monument to her memory than any in bronze. Her schools are so representative of a single individual as the Berry schools, few impressed so highly with a noble spirit," declared Dr. Chase. The honor accorded Miss Berry today is the second doctorate bestowed upon her, the University of Georgia previously having given her the title. She was also awarded the title of citizen and President Coolidge bestowed upon her the Roosevelt medal for meritorious service.

Florida Road Board Awards $464,497 Bids

TAMPA, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—Bridge and highway contracts, aggregating $464,497 and including one of the largest single time rock jobs ever let by the state government, were awarded here today by the state road department at the conclusion of its all-day district session.

The rock contract, totaling $297,675.32, was awarded to the Marianna Rock Products Company for the laying of 345,331 square yards of material on 30 miles of surface treated highway between Panama City and Cottondale in Jackson and Bay counties.

Two Tampa firms were included in the list of bidders. The Fred D. Beasley Company was given contracts for the construction of approaches to the bridge over Caloosahatchee river at Punta Gorda for $24,535.15 and for laying of Florida rock over a 10-mile stretch on the Tampa road north of Naples for $20,291.36, and the Florida Crushed Stone Company was low bidder on 1,173 tons of material to be used on the Ocala-Williston road in Marion county.

Other contracts were awarded as follows: L. M. Gray, Gainesville, 12 miles road between Trenton and Newberry, $99,942.92; J. U. Fletcher, Panama City, bridges in Bay county, $653.12; Florida Bridge and Construction Company, Orlando, bridges in Bay county, $4,055.80; R. J. Arrington & Son, DeFuniak Springs, bridges in Bay county, $890.15; Central Florida and Construction Company, Green Cove Springs, canal bridges in Palm Beach county, $7,991.15.

Back for Ocean-Williston road, Marion county, to Standard Rock Company and Florida Crushed Stone Company, Tampa; oil and asphalt to Texas Company, Jacksonville, $4,085.

Tydings Champions Senate Dial Phones

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Senator Tydings introduced a resolution today to direct the local telephone company to remove dial telephones from the offices of those senators who prefer the other type. Immediate action was blocked by Senator Glass, at whose instance the senate recently ordered the dial phones removed from the senate wing of the capitol and the senate office building. The company has over a week remaining in which to comply with the Glass resolution.

Workmen for Ford Denied U. S. Entry

NEW YORK, June 10.—(AP)—Two skilled British workmen brought to the United States by Henry Ford to reconstruct at Dearborn, Mich., the 14th century English castle recently imported were denied admittance to the country today. They were taken to Ellis Island to await an appeal to Washington, which Mr. Ford's attorneys said would be made.

Carolina Unveils Tablet to Lanier

LYNN, N. C., June 10.—(AP)—In ceremonies attended by six relatives and by a group of admirers, a tablet was unveiled today to Sidney Lanier, one of the south's best known poets, who died here September 1, 1881, after a long battle against illness. The exercises took place under the mimosa trees on the lawn of the John L. Jackson home where the poet-musician spent the last years of his life.

700 Miners Strike In Pennsylvania Field

MT. CARMELO, Pa., June 10.—(AP)—Seven hundred miners of the Reliance colliery today joined the 800 from the Alaska colliery who went on strike yesterday in protest against employment of non-union men on important work at the mines of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company.

$1,000,000 SHORTAGE FORCES BANK TO CLOSE

Cincinnati Institution Closes To Check Up on Losses.

CINCINNATI, June 10.—(AP)—The Cosmopolitan Bank & Trust Company was closed today by O. C. Gray, state superintendent of banks, after a shortage of from $750,000 to $800,000 was found in the bank accounts of the Henry L. Doherty Company, Cincinnati branch.

The Doherty Company was one of the largest depositors in the Cosmopolitan bank. Gray ordered the bank to remain closed, explaining that its affairs were in the hands of the state. Examiners and county officials said a shortage of more than $1,000,000 existed in the books of Amos W. Shafer, former district manager of the Doherty Company, and declared the seriousness of the shortage was emphasized by the fact that the bank's capital, according to a published statement last March 27, amounted to only $637,371.

Officials said the shortage was caused by stock market gambling operations of Shafer. Shafer was arraigned on an embezzlement charge, waived examination and held in lieu of $15,000 bond. The Doherty Company was one of the bank's largest depositors and the bank's affairs were investigated after it was discovered yesterday that a shortage estimated at least $1,000,000 existed in Shafer's books. Officials said Shafer lost the money playing the stock market. Shafer, however, refused to make any statement.

Mr. Gray said affairs of the Cosmopolitan bank have been turned over to the state banking commission and a thorough investigation will be made of its books. Scores of depositors swarmed around the bank at the time the institution was scheduled to open. A notice was posted on the doors that the bank would remain closed until the county prosecutor Nelson Schwab sent a corps of investigators to assist state bank examiners audit the bank's books.

Aside from being short nearly $800,000 in his accounts with the bank, examiners said Shafer was short at least $700,000 more in the accounts of customers of the Doherty firm. Examiners said Shafer "kited" customers' checks in an effort to recoup losses suffered during the collapse of the stock market.

Shafer was removed as district manager and was succeeded by Oscar F. Raine, head of the Doherty office in Cincinnati. No announcement was made concerning the stock market transactions in which Shafer lost large sums. Many depositors lined up outside the doors of the Cosmopolitan Bank and Trust Company and clamored for admittance, but bank watchmen allowed only bank employees to enter.

Pilot Arrested For Theft of Plane

LELAND, Miss., June 10.—(AP)—Allen Scott, airplane pilot, was arrested here today and charged with theft of a plane owned by the Arkansas Light and Power Company. The arrest followed Scott's departure in the plane from Pine Bluff, Ark., and a call by officials of the Pine Bluff district to Chief of Police Frank West.

The officer went to the airport and welcomed Scott when his plane swooped down. Scott was jailed and the plane was safely placed in a hangar. It all came about when several farmers, whose melons are their principal stock in trade, found that deer were making nocturnal raids on the fields and causing no end of damage. Funny thing about it, though, is that the "scarecrows" are far from human looking, being dressed up in crosses stuffed with straw. The deer will go nowhere near them, but are not afraid apparently of the farmers themselves.

Deer Raid Florida Watermelon Patches

MONTICELLO, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—Times were when "scarecrows" were placed in fields by farmers to scare crows away, as the name would imply. But there is a new use for them in Jefferson county. They now are being placed in watermelon fields to keep deer out and allow the melons to mature without molestation. It all came about when several farmers, whose melons are their principal stock in trade, found that deer were making nocturnal raids on the fields and causing no end of damage. Funny thing about it, though, is that the "scarecrows" are far from human looking, being dressed up in crosses stuffed with straw. The deer will go nowhere near them, but are not afraid apparently of the farmers themselves.

'Drunks' Great Rarity In 'Wet' British Isles

BOSTON, Mass., June 10.—(AP)—Quoting testimony before a royal commission on the decrease in drunkenness in England and Wales, George W. Wickersham said in an address here last night: "One magistrate said the decline in drunkenness had been so steady during the post-war years that he had suggested to the chief superintendent of police that it was rather unkind to bring an offender into the court; he ought to be taken to a museum."

Nashville Restaurant Stolen From Street

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 10.—(AP)—R. T. Moore reported the theft of his restaurant today. It was one of those lunch rooms on wheels, known in Nashville as "pie wagons." Only the wheels had been removed, and Mr. Moore couldn't figure out "how they got away with it."

Finest of Stage Training Given Kids' Revue Cast

One hundred and fifty Atlanta children are enjoying one of the most exciting affairs of their lives these days. Also one of the finest of opportunities for training that should be of inestimable benefit to them in later life.

The group—all under 14 years of age—comprises the cast for the big kiddie stage production, "Toytown Revue," which is to be given at Loew's Capitol theater the week of June 23 as a benefit to raise money for the milk fund for the child patients at the Scottish Rite hospital. Under the guiding hand of Miss Ruth Alpert, first lieutenant for Chester Hale, the famous Broadway revue producer, these child entertainers are securing a training that would, otherwise, cost much in fees for lessons. Miss Alpert will, during the next two weeks, train and rehearse them for the big show—giving them training in ensemble dancing and group numbers that is not generally to be secured outside of the biggest New York dance studios.

Then, best of all, a few days before the opening of the show on Loew's Capitol stage, Chester Hale himself is coming to Atlanta. He is making the trip especially to witness the final rehearsals and to see the opening performance of the show. And, it is whispered, he also wants to secure some inside information about many of the really splendid child performers Atlanta counts as her own. Mr. Hale is always on the lookout for exceptional performers for the famous stage unit shows he is constantly training for the stage of the Capitol theater in New York. Particularly for the world-famous Chester Hale chorus groups of beautiful girls. He has said that it is difficult to find girls capable of learning the complicated dance routines necessary for these choruses. And he has been advised that he can probably find more children giving greater promise of dance genius in Atlanta than in any other city of the country.

And that's why he's coming to see this show himself after Miss Alpert has imparted all the stage wisdom and dance ability she can to the youngsters herself.

Germany To Stop Muskrat Breeding

BERLIN, June 10.—(AP)—The commissioner of forests, Ludwig Schuster, has put his foot down on wholesale muskrat breeding on the ground that the rodents would undermine railroad and river embankments and impair the safety of dams, waterworks and roadways. Commissioner Schuster pointed out that 50,000 muskrats are killed annually in Germany to arrest the damage they cause. To raise them commercially, he said, would be to invite great trouble.

Canada Asks Hoover To Visit Province

LONG HOURS OF LABOR ENGROSS TEXTILE CLINIC

Ills of Industry Discussed at Boston Social Conference.

BOSTON, June 10.—(AP)—Long hours of labor met censure from employer, labor union leader and church worker alike at a discussion at the national conference of Social Work today of the problems of the southern textile industry.

Thomas F. McMahon, of New York, international president of the United Textile Workers of America, proposed education to break down the wall separating management and workers. Henry P. Kendall, president of the Kendall Company of Boston, operators of southern mills, proposed deliberate underproduction and scientific management linked to common sense and consideration of the point of view of employees as the means of solving problems of the textile industry in any part of the country. James Myers, industrial secretary of the church and social service of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, said labor troubles in the southern mills were mostly due to conditions in the mills themselves rather than to agitators. He asserted the religious called only for good working conditions, but for the ideal of democracy in industrial relations.

Ellis Island Detains Artisans of Ford

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Labor department officials indicated today it was probable the two English artisans brought to this country by Henry Ford to set up an ancient English cottage at Dearborn, Mich., would be permitted to enter the country after a special hearing which is to be held before the secretary of labor. The two are detained at Ellis Island. While information before the department does not yet include the official record of their case, Assistant Secretary Husband said he understood a showing would be made that no American workers are available capable of performing the work Mr. Ford employed them for. Should the record bear this out, he said, their entry would be lawful under the contract labor statute.

Emory's Graduating Class Urged To 'Live Dangerously'

English Clergyman Warns 263 Seniors To Achieve Something More in Life Than Mediocrity.

Emory University's largest graduating class—263 students—was urged to "live dangerously" by the Rev. John Earnest Rattenbury, distinguished English clergyman, in the baccalaureate address Tuesday morning. Raising his speech on the words of Robert Browning:

"That low man goes on adding one to one
His hundreds soon hit.
This high man aims at a million
Misses an unit."

The noted lecturer urged something more than mediocrity, which he said is the base of modern civilization. Nietzsche's words "Live dangerously" are "noble and Christian," he said.

"Standardized men are not wanted but individuals. Mass production may be good for automobiles but not for men, and even standardized education is in danger of producing men who live in quotation marks rather than in great personalities."

Literary men were quoted to show that mere mediocrity is displeasing alike to God and the devil. The priest denies that allows man to lose nothing and yet gain nothing is insufficient. That type of prudence is like the prudence assumed in ecclesiastical circles in a man who does no harm and yet does nothing else. This was the man of one talent in the Lord's parable, the speaker said. And the modern church has preached caution and propriety so much that the man of one talent would inevitably be made a bishop today because of his excessive prudence.

America Commended.
America was commended as a land of men who have made some of the greatest ventures the world has ever known. "However much at times the great resources of America have dazzled men by their material glitter, the stars have not ceased to shine, and no people have lived more capable of seeing the great ideal and following it. The discontent of the conscience with the evils of alcohol sapping the national life and threatening the future of the nation, the adventures of national daring, culminating in the eighteenth amendment of your constitution, which the world has ever seen."

"There are many other high adventures open to a nation of idealists, but one of the greatest open to America is the great ideal of international peace and brotherhood. The fulfillment of it depends in the long run as much, perhaps more on the idealism of the United States of America, as on any other thing."

The Rev. Mr. Rattenbury, of England, received an honorary degree of doctor of divinity from the university and Miss Tommie Dora Barker, retiring librarian of the Atlanta Carnegie library, received the degree of doctor of literature and Dr. E. C. Davis, of the Davis-Fischer sanatorium here, was made doctor of laws.

The 263 degrees awarded students at the commencement exercises included those of bachelor of business administration, bachelor of philosophy, bachelor of science, bachelor of arts, bachelor of arts in library science, master of arts, master of science, bachelor of laws, doctor of medicine, bachelor of divinity.

Medals and Prizes.
The medals and prizes were as follows:

The Palmer mathematics medal, George S. Craft, Atlanta.
The Reppard Greek medal, Robert Sled, Decatur.
The McCord Latin medal, Anna Baum, Atlanta.
The Rivers accounting medal, C. M. Stephenson, Vidalia.

The Pi Alpha medals in chemistry, Margaret Belle Isle, Atlanta, and W. F. Gresham, Prattville, Ala.
Three medals of note also were awarded to law students. The Samuel C. Williams medal for the highest average in the senior class, Edgar Chambers, Jr., Atlanta. The W. S. Thompson medal for the highest average in the second year class, William Hamilton Chadwick, Atlanta.

The W. M. Pharr medal for the highest average in the first-year class, Maradade Hardeman Blackshear, Dublin.

Nine students received commissions for appointments as second lieutenants in the officers' reserve corps of the United States army.

President Harvey W. Cox, who awarded the degrees, pointed out that 320 students had been graduated by the university this year, including the 76 who received degrees at the end of the quarters earlier in the year.

The commencement program opened with the procession of the "Goin' Home" (Drorak) was sung by George Rogers, club baritone. The Emory orchestra directed by Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey furnished the commencement music.

PAUL DONEHOO HEADS WORKERS FOR BLIND

New Constitution Adopted Providing for Three Classes of Members.

Paul Donehoo was re-elected president of the Georgia Association of Workers for the Blind at the Tuesday afternoon session of the annual convention in the Henry Grady hotel. Other officers elected were Charles G. Beck, first vice president; Louis H. Beck, second vice president; J. J. Childs, treasurer, and Mrs. J. J. Bloom, secretary.

Directors for the ensuing year, from the state at large, are George Goddard, B. G. King, Savannah; Tom Law, Atlanta; George Ripley, Jr., and W. R. McDonald, of Augusta. District directors are Marion Sims, Macon, sixth; O. W. Thiff, Newnan, fourth; W. E. Cooper, Windsor, ninth; Paul W. Chapman, Athens, eighth; Colonel F. W. Alstetter, Savannah, first; D. Owens, Albany, second; John Ashley Jones, Atlanta, fifth, and Mrs. E. M. Bailey, Acworth, seventh.

Business transacted during Tuesday included adoption, with amendments, of a new constitution providing for three classes of members, contributing and sustaining members being added to the regular roster, and for organization of chapters in each of the congressional districts.

Reports of organizations and commissions co-operating with the association were heard as follows: State welfare department, by Miss Van Dunsen; Georgia library commission, Miss Beverly Wheatcroft; Lions Club, Dr. Witherspoon Dodge; Georgia Academy for the Blind, Professor R. H. McNeal; Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Albert Akers, and the Woman's Jewish Council, Mrs. Alfred Myers.

Dr. Raymond P. Harris, of Savannah, made the principal address of the afternoon, appealing especially to his audience because he, a widely known physician, has been blind for a little more than two years and the problems of rehabilitation are very new and vital to him. He said the rehabilitation of the blind is an economic problem in which society should be interested, rather than an object of charity. He thought that of 5,000 blind people in the state at least 200 could be made self-sustaining.

Miniature Golf Course Permitted

Members of the board of zoning appeals Tuesday set a precedent regarding establishment of miniature golf courses in Atlanta, when it directed Charles Bowen, city building inspector, to permit construction of such a course at 281 East Wesley avenue, the permit to extend until December 31, of this year.

A petition asking that the property be rezoned for business was refused, and the appeals body granted the permit for a specified time.

High Prices Seen For Georgia Peaches

High prices this year for Georgia peaches was predicted Tuesday by A. D. Jones, director of the bureau of markets of the state department of agriculture, who has just completed a crop survey of eight southern states. Mr. Jones said the total crop would be less than 13,000 cars. The Arkansas orchards were so badly damaged by cold weather early in the spring that practically no shipments will be made, he said.

Lunquest Will Help Orphans, Tallulah School

Requests to the Methodist Orphans' home at Decatur and the Tallulah Falls Industrial school were contained in the will of Mrs. Sarah Cornelia Lunquest, wife of the late Dr. M. J. Lunquest, filed Tuesday with the Fulton county ordinary for probate. The estate was valued at approximately $100,000. Income from a trust fund of $20,000 is to go to Miss Nancy Lillian White during her lifetime and at her death the trust fund is to be divided between the orphans home and the Tallulah Falls school.

The rest of the estate is divided into two portions. One part is divided between seven persons, as follows: Mrs. Polk Miller, of Barnevill, sister of Dr. Lunquest; the four children of Joseph Lunquest; the testator's brother-in-law, Dr. Marcus H. Miller, of Baltimore, Md., and Mrs. Margaret M. Hines, of Barnevill. The other half of the residue is to be placed in a trust fund for the orphans' home and the Tallulah Falls school. Oscar Venable was named executor.

Consider.... the RELATIVE cost of fuel

A sensible consideration of the problem home heating means that its cost be kept in perspective. Certainly the heating expense should be as low as possible and is consistent with economy, efficiency and comfort.

A ton of coal equals in heat units 194 gallons of oil and 28,000 cubic feet of natural gas. A ton of coal costs $7.00; 194 gallons of oil $15.52; 28,000 cubic feet of natural gas $30.00. Oil will cost you more the more you use. Natural Gas practically as much.

Investigate... before about and to any other home of home as possible. Other fuels are serviceable in many ways, but for use in home heating, the gas is the most dependable, safe and accurate. Your coal dealer is in the position which you should consider, but check in your heating survey will gladly respond.

Safe! Dependable! COAL Economical

Before You Invest in Other Fuel Check Up on Comparative Costs

Why be in a hurry to rush into an investment you may regret? Spring heating will be here. You'll have all summer to check up on what you heating will cost you.

To convert your coal-burning equipment to use with gas costs money. Experience in other cities proves that such equipment is expensive to operate, and many types are wholly unsatisfactory. But once installed, you must use them all the time with vague oil "guesses."

Selenium's unsatisfactory "guess" with vague oil "guesses" keep your gas bill down.

Gas has its uses—but in Atlanta, dependent upon 400 line—cannot compare with coal for SAFETY—DEPENDABILITY.

In justice to yourself, make a thorough investigation before you rush into an investment you may regret. Spring heating will be here. You'll have all summer to check up on what you heating will cost you.

Compare the Cost

A ton of average coal contains 19,400,000 Btu. The ton of coal costs $7.00. 194 gallons of oil cost $15.52. 28,000 cubic feet of natural gas cost $30.00.

What's All The SHOOTIN' FOR?

YOU don't have to wonder about gas home heating.

You don't have to "take a chance" that you might not like it—that it might be too expensive, that it might not be reliable, that it might cost you "three times as much as coal," or that anything else about it might be undesirable.

We'll take all the chances. We know about it. We know that it is economical, dependable, safe and will be entirely satisfactory to you. You may be quite sure that we knew that, and exactly the satisfaction it has given everywhere else, before we spent millions of dollars to make it available to you.

So we are quite willing for you to try it out for yourself—all the winter, if you like, in your own home, in your own furnace at our risk. If you shouldn't like it we'll take back the equipment and refund all payments you may have made on it. And we'll replace your present grates at our expense. You need pay only for the gas you use.

Propaganda against gas heating won't keep your house warm, nor give you the clean, economical, carefree comfort of gas heat.

Gas home heating is entirely practical for you—as you hoped it would be. And next winter isn't so far off now.

Why not try it? You can't lose.

Prison Riots Theme For 'The Big House'

One of the most stirring pictures to show in Atlanta will open Monday at the Capitol theater, entitled, "The Big House."

The picture is a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer all-talking, with an all-star cast, including Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Robert Montgomery, George Martin, Karl Dane, Lewis Stone, Lila Hyams and many others. Chester Morris, remembered for his splendid work in "The Case of Ser-gent Greisch," is the hero of "The Big House." His acting in this picture is superlative.

"The Big House" is a gripping story of convict life in one of the United States federal prisons. The highlight of the picture is reached when the prisoners capture the guards and demand their liberty or the death of the prison officials. Lewis Stone portrays the part of the warden, Lila Hyams does splendidly in her role as the sister of Robert Montgomery, also a prisoner. She befriends Morris when he is an escaped convict. They fall in love and Chester decides to go straight and live down his past, but is recaptured.

"The Big House" has a beautiful ending when Morris saves many of the captured guards' lives and quells the prison riot. For this deed he is given a full pardon and walks from the prison, a free man, into the arms of his sweetheart.

LaGuardia Advances Unemployment Aid

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—Representative LaGuardia, republican, New York, today proposed a national conference to formulate uniform labor and public welfare laws to decrease unemployment distress.

The conference, under a resolution introduced by the New Yorker, would be directed to study such problems as the daily hours of service, employment of children, employment agencies and insurance, and old-age pensions.

Discussing his measure in the house, LaGuardia urged it as a companion measure to the Wagner unemployment bill, upon which the house judiciary committee will open hearings tomorrow.

Huie Sidewalk Signs Are Ordered Removed

Placards appearing on telegraph and telephone poles about the city and stenciled signs on sidewalks advertising the candidacy of Ben T. Huie for mayor have been ordered removed by Chief of Police James L. Beavers.

At the same time, captains on the day watch at headquarters were instructed to notify all candidates that Section 951 of the code of the city of Atlanta, prohibits the defacing of poles and provides a penalty of $25 for the offense.

Chief Beavers' order was impersonal, but understood at headquarters to apply, so far as removal of signs is concerned, to those put up by Huie supporters.

The body found yesterday was that of a man about 25 years old. In the clothing was a Canadian customs pass for "50 cases of ale."

Mrs. French appeared in court clad in a black dress, black coat trimmed with white fur on the collar and cuffs. She sat with her husband, a salesman, who was traveling when she shot Garmon, and a sister, Mrs. Beulah Adams. She conferred with her counsel, James A. Branch and William Schley Howard, continuously during the selection of the jury.

Though it was announced at the outset that no testimony would be heard during the day a large crowd of curious remained in the courtroom throughout the morning. Nearly half of them were women.

VOTE ON TARIFF SET FOR FRIDAY

tors suggested they had engagements which would prevent them being on hand earlier Friday afternoon.

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader, left tonight to make a speech in Toronto. He did not want to vote Thursday. Senator Helms, democrat, Alabama, is leaving town Friday after the vote.

Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, also wanted to leave Friday to attend exercises at Dartmouth college and suggested a vote Thursday but the Friday hour determined upon met his wishes.

Senator Blaine indicated to a vote tomorrow on the ground the lobby committee had scheduled a session to determine what to do about Bishop Capone, but he held that was more important than the tariff.

COMEDY IS FEATURE OF PROGRAM AT FOX

With El Brendel, the comical Swede, and Marjorie White, the funny flapper, leading the funmakers, "The Movietone Follies of 1930"—not a revue—is proving one of the biggest laugh-provokers of the season at the Fox theater this week. Sharing honors easily with the feature picture is Fanchon and Marco's "Let's Pretend" idea, a stage presentation that is far above the average, with Al Latell, the famous dog impersonator, and Tillyou and Rogers, comedy dancers and acrobats, equally entertaining.

Don and Iris Wilkins, the former master of ceremonies since the Fox opened, and the latter organist, are bidding farewell to their friends this week in specially prepared programs. Don's "Leavin' Atlanta Blues" is particularly entertaining. The overture by Enrico Leida and the Fox grand orchestra, "El Guarany," is another distinct feature. The change of policy, whereby complete new shows open on Saturdays, beginning this coming Saturday, has created a lot of favorable comment, according to the management.

Hot Weather Is Seen Today In Forecast

Fair weather for today, with a temperature in the early afternoon of about 80 degrees, was forecast by C. F. von Herrmann, head of the local office of the United States weather bureau. High temperature Tuesday was 79 degrees and low was 58.

Mr. von Herrmann pointed out that Atlanta usually has a 90-degree temperature in April, but that this year the season is approaching mid-June without such a degree of heat being recorded.

Entertainment Given For Retail Grocers

Radio entertainers well known to Atlanta listeners featured the entertainment at a reception tendered members of the Atlanta Retail Grocers and their families by the Stone Baking Company Tuesday night which was attended by more than 600 persons.

"Aunt Sally," Green B. Adair, the Roy Wall quartet and the Southland Five orchestra, featured on WGST programs, and Harry Cooper of the WSB staff, provided the array of music. The reception was given in the Stone company auditorium and was followed by a buffet supper and dancing.

Officials of the baking company gave short talks and Manager George E. Drake took occasion to call attention to the Stone's children picnic, which will be given at Lakewood Park on Wednesday, July 25, when over 50,000 Stone's Southern cakes and several thousand of the company's most Dairy Product, Inc., milk will be given free at the amusement resort.

U. of Chicago Head Addresses Graduates

CHICAGO, June 10.—(AP)—The youthful president of the University of Chicago, Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, stood before the graduating class of 843 today and renewed his challenge to the value of present educational methods and organization.

Addressing the graduates, many of whom were older than he, President Hutchins said the loss of time and initiative is the curse of our educational system.

He said our whole system was set up for the average student, and his solution was for universities to develop a course of general higher education.

Gang Lord Flashes Clothes and Money in Court

MIAMI, Fla., June 10.—(UN)—After two sessions punctuated by complete change of attire for Alphonse Capone, Chicago gang leader, hearing a projected padlocking of the Capone residence at Miami Beach was continued today until tomorrow morning.

Demonstrating his knowledge of correct morning and afternoon attire for persons whose property is threatened with padlock, Capone appeared in court this morning dressed in a natty white suit. At the afternoon session he wore a brown suit, tie, sport shoes and pongee jacket hat to match.

The owner of the defendant property won more attention than the case at hand as he paid a newsboy $5 for a paper and flashed a fistful of bills before reporters grouped in the lobby, telling them to "divide it."

Frankie Newton, Capone's combination caretaker and head witness, denied ever serving liquor in the gang chief's residence but later admitted he personally had been convicted of possessing liquor and arrested for several months of the Capone case. He brought liquor into the house without knowledge of the owner.

D. H. Rino, deputy sheriff, testified he entered the Capone residence with a fugitive warrant and saw a bottle of whisky in the kitchen. Another deputy testified a liquor raid at the home resulted in seizure of one full sack and three partly full sacks of four-quart bottles of liquor.

J. H. Wendall, Hialeah publisher, gave high praise of Capone's character, explaining he accompanied his wife, two sons and two daughters to a Capone party.

J. O. Barker, fingerprint expert, testified he had discovered Ralph "Bottles" Capone, brother of Al, in the same car with Ray Nugent, wanted for murder in Toledo, Ohio. The defense, however, disproved this statement, showing Ralph Capone had not been in Dade county for the past two years.

Court attaché decided as sessions adjourned that no facts thus far had been presented to show Capone as a law breaker.

Hoover's Classmates As Lad Honor Him

NEWBERG, Ore., June 10.—(AP)—From far beyond the green hills of Chehalis valley came many gray-haired men and women yesterday to the little white schoolhouse where many years ago they used to study and play with a "quiet little lad who made no stir and who was not distinguished in any particular way while here." They came to honor that lad—Bertie Hoover.

The little white school was Pacific Academy in 1885 when Herbert Hoover enrolled as a student. Now it has grown into Pacific University. In the main building of the university a bronze tablet telling of Hoover's student days was unveiled. The tablet, Dr. Levi T. Penning, president of the college, described as "a tribute of love and respect" from Hoover from his boyhood school.

TURKEY, GREECE SIGN FRIENDSHIP TREATY

New Agreement Aid to Many Now Unmarried Couples.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, June 10.—(AP)—A treaty of friendship between Turkey and Greece was signed here today.

The Turkish minister, Dr. Tefik Ruzhdi Bey and the Greek minister at Ankara, M. Polychroniadis, shook hands after their signatures had been affixed to the document, and exchanged comments regarding their two countries.

The long-awaited agreement was considered a prelude to Turko-Greek amity pacts, entailing a trip of Premier Venizelos in October to Ankara. The trip would be made across Anatolian plains where Turko-Greek armies fought eight years ago. The Turkish press said that consummation of the friendship agreement made the Turkish horizon more peaceful than it had been for six centuries. Twenty thousand Greeks in Istanbul, who also the accord are recognized as established residents, especially welcomed the treaty. During the last seven years inability of the two nations to agree upon their status has made them officially "lost souls," unable to procure passports or any legal documents.

The Turkish government requires civil marriages, but not recognizing these Greeks as citizens of any country would not grant the marriage licenses. Hence there were at least 200 couples living together without a legalized union who are now able to enter legal marriages.

The accord also calls upon the mixed commission for settlement within six months of 1,000,000 property claims remaining among the claims of approximately 1,500,000 Greeks formerly sent from Turkey to Greece and 400,000 Turks sent from Greece to Turkey. The commission will have to speed up, for its rate of working during the last seven years would mean several hundred years before a complete settlement could be reached.

You probably know the Oakland Eight best as a car of superior performance. Its exceptional speed—its thrilling pick-up—its masterly hill-climbing power are qualities that people are apt to note and remember. But the Oakland Eight is a car of unusual comfort, too.

A car whose remarkable roadability invites you to open the throttle—and take even the roughest roads with a feeling of restfulness and safety. Reasons? Here they are: An 85-horsepower engine whose high ratio of power to the weight of the car eliminates all sense of effort or strain. A low center of gravity that minimizes swaying and keeps you hugging the road securely. A wheelbase of 117 inches, and carefully worked out springs whose action is controlled by Lovejoy Hydraulic Shock Absorbers. Skillful distribution of weight that contributes to harmony of motion. A steering gear that works on roller bearings.

CRACKERS, 4 TO 3; TAKE SIXTH PLACE

"We experts"—to use that classic line in a jocular way to denigrate the serious thinkers who sit in the press box at Spiller field—made a bad guess on a play in the final Nashville-Atlanta game Saturday.

At great expense the proponent of this two-column material finally ran down Umpire Cotton Knaupp by telegraph and secured the official ruling on the matter. It was up to me as the current official scorer. The executive urge drove me on and on; responsibility is a relentless thing, what?

Umpire Knaupp escaped the park before any of us could nab him last Saturday and we had to rub our minds together to produce what passed for a spark of truth. Instead we got merely foxfire. (See yesterday's article).

THE FACTS AT LAST.

Notice the hesitancy in getting down to facts. Here it is 125 words later and still the details have not come out of the machine. The delay is due to the fact that the facts are "on" us. Kind of hate to record them.

The first three Nashville players singled in the first inning and filled the bases.

Poole lifted a fly ball just back of shortstop.

Langford came in on the run, touched the ball and fumbled it. The runner on third scored.

Appling picked up the fumbled ball and threw to Lamotte at third and FORCED the man coming down from second.

Meanwhile Poole had run past Partridge who had been on first and was going toward second.

The umpire waved Poole out of the game. Partridge in the scramble beat a throw back to first and remained on that sack. Thus two were out.

Now the best mental efforts of the gentlemen of the press in the hangar produced a sour ruling. We misinterpreted a gesture of the umpire for "infield fly" and decided he had ruled Poole out on that account. That the ball sailed into the outfield was just a break, we thought; it could have been handled by an infielder anyhow.

The tip off should have been that a man was FORCED at third on the play; this would have been impossible under the infield fly ruling that we supplied; but we muffed it.

The correct ruling was Poole was out for passing the preceding base runner and Marquardt was forced at third. The infield fly stuff was all wet.

The play was a hummer all right. The force around the Cracker barrel yesterday at Oglethorpe headed by Frank Anderson were discussing it.

Even now there is some question of whether a man can be FORCED at third—the runner never was tagged—when a base runner passes the preceding runner on the paths. However, The Man says it is so.

LUKE'S LIKE TRAVIS JACKSON.

Young Luke Appling certainly is getting carloads of verbal flowers these days from experts who have seen him work. Here is one from Clyde Milan, manager of the Barons, picked out of the Birmingham News:

"Clyde Milan had a boost for Luke Appling, the younger Atlanta picked up off the Oglethorpe campus. 'Appling looks more like Travis Jackson than any other kid I ever saw break into the Southern league,' said Clyde. 'He comes in on grounders just like Jackson and looks like he will hit to me. I believe the kid has a great future.'

CONSIDERING HIS ACID.

Off-hand I believe Zipp Newman gave a faster summary of Charlie Paddock's scream about prohibition ruining our athletes than any of those who tried their hand in six or seven hundred words. Zipp said:

"Charlie Paddock has written a story entitled 'Booze Beats Out Athletes.' Charlie should know."

WELL, THAT'S OVER!

Worn to a mere shred of their former selves from the gruelling pace of commencement dances, six Georgia Tech football stars are leaving for Camp McClelland.

There in the daily drills, hikes and athletic contests; they can get a good long rest and come back in the fall ready for practice.

Captain Earl Dunlap, Vance Maree, Tom Jones, Sam Colvin, Isaacs and Merritt are going and expect to get their strength back in no time on the reserve training camp routine.

BOYNTON WINS DAVIS CUP PLAY AT CHARLESTON IN SEMI-FINALS

CHARLESTON, S. C., June 10.—(AP)—A dogged, heavy little 15-year-old neophyte, Julian Robertson, of Salisbury, N. C., one of the seeded men, 1-6, 6-4, 5-6. The match was a second round one. Ralph Demotte, of Atlanta, also advanced to the third round.

Jack Mooney, of Atlanta, twice holder of the title; Gus Fener, and Carroll Turner, both of Miami and advanced to the third round.

Wilder Hines, Columbia tennis star, advanced to the second round by defeating Joe Moody, Charleston, 6-0, 6-1.

Ralph DeMotte, Atlanta, defeated James M. Hagedorn, Charleston, 6-0, 6-1. Louis Wright, Charlotte, won over Blackburn Hughes, Memphis, Tenn., and Charleston, 6-3, 6-1. Lawrence Salley, Florida, went up by winning over Ross Chesbro, Atlanta, 6-4, 6-2.

Davis cup tennis play in the European zone has reached the semi-final round with Japan, Australia, Italy and Czechoslovakia still in the fight.

Semi-final round pairings pit Australia against Italy and Japan against Czechoslovakia. The survivors will meet in the zone final, the winner of which will play the United States, American zone champions, for the right to challenge France, cup holder for the last three years.

On the basis of their play in the third round, Australia and Japan will be heavy favorites to reach the final round. Japan, boasting a strong team headed by Takeichi Harada, should have little trouble with Czechoslovakia. Italy, with Baron H. I. De Morpurgo leading the charge, should give Australia a bitter fight, but De Morpurgo can't hope to swing the tide of victory toward Italy all by himself. His partner, Pietro Gaslini, does not figure to be a match for either of the Australian stars, Henry Hopman and Jack Crawford, in singles, and the Hopman-Crawford double combination appears stronger than anything the Italians can put on the courts.

JACK SHARKEY AND SCHMELING SET FOR FIGHT

Danforth Finds Little To Choose Between Two Heavyweights.

By Ed Danforth,

Sports Editor The Constitution.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Two dissimilar prize fighters, who have little in common save approximate weight, have concluded extensive training for a 15-round fight with gloves here Thursday night in the Yankee stadium. It is an artificial contest for the championship of the world, and the benefit of the milk fund conducted by the Hearst New York newspaper.

The contest is unique in that neither participant holds the title, yet about 11 o'clock Thursday night one of them will be saluted as champion of the world by the New York boxing commission, just as if he had beaten the champion or whipped the challenger.

This grotesque situation developed simply because two years ago a pug named Gene Tunney, formerly of the United States marines, gave up his world title and began practicing to become a society man.

The candidates are awkward to call them challengers—are diverse lumps of sediment left in the pugilistic sieve shaken under the direction of the New York commission, presumably they are the best in the heavyweight class, which may not be saying much for them. To think of either of them in the ring with Gene Tunney, Dempsey, Johnson, Fitzsimmons, Jeffries, Corbett is to shudder.

Jack Sharkey is denominated the American entry. He was born in Binghamton, N. Y., and Lithuanian parents. The name Sharkey is assumed for reasons immediately to be made clear. His real name is—well, it is hard to say.

Several years ago, when Jack was in the midst of one of the baragages that won him the title of the Talkative Tar and other appellations indicative of fluent conversation, he told the press that he was born "Cukoshay." This spelling was generally accepted when necessary to designate the assumed name Sharkey, with harmless variations—such as "Cukoshay," "Cukashay" and so on.

When the census-takers came around to get all the news the question of Sharkey's name came up again. Jack's father came up with the name "Cukoshay" and the census-takers kept the title in America, to use Sharkey's own press agent's words, "but step away from lower Europe. He is a typical ingenuito of this melting pot in which we live. Oh, yes, they have sounded the patriotic trombone in the ballyhoo long since. Sharkey has decided to take the crown across the seas to Germany. It is the cry of alarm. At that, it is more plausible a battle cry than "make the world safe for democracy." But it has not stirred up quite as much excitement. In fact tens of thousands in the Yankee stadium thought they will cheer the spirit of the moment. Such bona fide have ever lived the dull routine of the training camp at Orangeburg.

Sharkey is a fine appearing young giant. His friends have pictured him as a man who loves the wife and kids. As a boyish athlete with an unusual touch of humor, and as a cool, crafty ringman, Sharkey's home life no doubt is ideal; certainly he never struck his wife nor any of the women. Such bona fide have ever lived the dull routine of the training camp at Orangeburg.

But as to his being a cool, crafty ringman, Sharkey has shown on more than one occasion that when hard hit he can lose his temper and throw fits of childish petulance to say nothing of generalship to the four corners.

PROMISES AND FAILURES.

His ring record is a succession of promises and failures. He surged up through the ranks of the heavyweights in 1926 like a cyclone. He beat George Greffey and Harry Wills, the two black clouds, and won a chance at Jack Dempsey. In that fight with Dempsey he reached the peak of his career. He nearly stopped Dempsey in the first round and beat him down and out in the seventh before a barrage of what many said were low blows. But Sharkey has never been the same since—and the school your correspondent strings with thinks he never will again. Johnny Risko beat Sharkey in the 1928 campaign. Pleading Tom Heeney pounded out a decision over him and he lost a chance to fight Tunney.

Then old K. O. Christner, of Akron, battered Sharkey badly and the best Jack could get out of it was an empty hairline victory. Then the Lithuanian won a sour decision over

WEBB BEATEN IN TEN ROUNDS; AVERA KAYOED

Tommy Rios Given Decision in Main Event as Crowd Boos.

Tommy Rios, Mexican welterweight, from Chicago, won a 10-round decision over Spike Webb, of Charlott, N. C., Tuesday night at the city auditorium in an uninteresting fight for the most part. There was very little real fighting during the ten rounds which were featured by many clinches.

Both fighters started off cautiously and milled around for several rounds without any damage being done. Rios carried the fight for the first five rounds, but in doing so landed few real punishing blows. A majority of his punches were short body jabs.

Webb rallied with several severe head punches in the sixth and seventh rounds and worried the Chicago battler no little. Webb succeeded in breaking through Rios' defense and carried the fight for several rounds in the sixth, seventh and eighth rounds.

In the final two rounds both fought for an opening and Rios was jabbing Webb with lightning-like punches when the final bell rang. He was given the decision by Referee Jarvis, amid the jeers from the spectators.

In the semi-windup, Stiles Attaway knocked out Pug Avera in the third round of a scheduled 10-round bout. Avera easily won the first round but took plenty of punishment in the second and third before he took the count.

Shootie Copeland won a six-round decision over Happy Curtis in a wild affair. Both fighters apparently were nearly out after the third round and swinging wildly. Cy Young, the referee, caught one of the blows on the shoulder but smiled it off.

Allen and Mayfield, Warshaw fought six rounds to a well-earned draw. It was a good fight at times, but nothing to write home about. Warshaw started off strong, but once his energy was expended Allen proceeded to mix things and even the count.

Clint Townes won a six-round decision over Young Trowbridge. One of the fighters landed a six-round knockout and the other had a four-round knockout. It was announced as a four-rounder and when the referee announced a draw both sides were up from the crowd and Townes' manager shouted off loudly. The fighters were not satisfied and Cy Young, a new referee, was called in to referee the fight for an extra two rounds and Townes won.

Aggies May Name Hayes as Director

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 10.—(AP)—The Commercial Appeal said Tuesday that the appointment of E. C. (Buck) Hayes, University of Indiana track coach, as director of athletics at Mississippi A. & M., Starkville, was being recommended to A. & M. board of trustees by President B. M. Walker. Hayes would succeed W. D. Chandler, director for more than 20 years.

Hayes had not indicated whether he would accept, but the paper reported Dr. J. C. (Buck) Hayes, an immediate and favorable reply to the offer. The Indiana coach formerly coached basketball and track at A. & M.

The paper said Chadwick is to be given the post of director of physical education, and that his new department is to be distinct from that of athletics.

Bright Future Seen By Heads of Pirates

The Pirates have fine prospects ahead. The club is young and promising. Seven players are 25—Hemery, Bartell, Subr, Brickell, Clarke, Moss and Cox. French is but 22. Lloyd Warner is 24. Spencer and Enzel are 25. Sweeney, Erickson and Comorosky are 26 and Paul Warner 27.

Jess Guilford, of Woodland, defending champion, appeared certain to land third place with his 208. Mike Brady, New York professional and former title holder, had a 311, which was equalled by Tony Manero, Turnesa's assistant at Elmford.

Genaro Retains Flyweight Crown

TORONTO, Ont., June 10.—(AP)—Frankie Genaro, flyweight champion of the world in the eyes of the National Boxing Commission, retained his title here tonight, winning a 10-round decision fight with Albert (Frenchy) Belanger, of Toronto, Canadian champion and former world's title holder.

The diminutive New Yorker took the lead after the fourth round, when he solved Belanger's crowding tactics, and for the remaining six rounds was in control of the situation. Belanger had a margin in the early rounds mainly through his forcing the pace with a two-handed drive that puzzled Genaro.

After the fourth round Genaro's speed and cleverness began to tell, although Belanger refused to back up when the champion began sending both rights and lefts to the head and body.

A Very Happy Man

And who wouldn't be? His Brooklyn Robins are now leading the National league race by three and one-half games and everything is clicking the way he wants it. That is why Uncle Wilbert Robinson is all smiles these days. His Robins were not counted in the race this season when the barrier went up in April, but look at them now.

Appling And Crackers Are 'Right'-Red Smith

Club Now on Stride, Former Third Sacker Thinks; Sees Big Time for Luke.

By Ralph McGill.

J. Carlyle (Red) Smith, one of the greatest infielders of 10 years ago, sees a bright future for the Crackers and for Luke Appling, the college infielder whom the Crackers signed a few days ago.

J. Carlyle Smith was discovered in Trammell Scott's sports store Tuesday afternoon. He was hitting the bats, swinging them and sighting down them.

"Just like an old fire horse," said Trammell Scott. "No, sir," said J. Carlyle Smith. "It's that kid of mine. He isn't hitting here lately and I said something about it at Sunday school yesterday. And what do you think he said right out before a lot of people? He said, 'Well, anyhow, Walter Johnson didn't strike me out six times out of seven.' I'm looking at bats for him. I want him to hit, not talk."

"The Crackers are just now going along like they should have been going all year," said Red Smith. "I never did understand why they weren't winning. They weren't getting very good pitching but they should have done better."

"I guess they weren't getting enough hot weather," he said. "Baseball is a game that ought never to be played unless the thermometer is registering at least an 85 in the shade. The Crackers will improve as it gets hotter."

"As for this boy Appling, you can just put it down that he is on the way to the big show. He can hit that baseball. I liked his looks at the date. I think I can tell a hitter when I see one and this boy is one. And that's something you can't teach. There never was a real hitter who wasn't a hitter naturally. You can't teach them to field, but not to hit."

"Some of the baseball people say that he holds his hands a bit too stiff, when he fields. Maybe so, I don't notice anything particularly bad about his fielding but any faults there can be corrected. He knows how to hit. That's what's important. He is going up."

"Another thing that is in his favor," continued J. Carlyle, warning to his subject, "is that he is quiet and a listener. It takes a listener to break in right. Appling is quiet and will get along. A lot of kids have talked themselves out of baseball."

Harry Robertson, Oglethorpe football coach, who was present, asked that the subject be dropped. "Every time I see him play ball tears roll down my shirt front," he said. "When he signed to play baseball I lost one of the best halfbacks I ever had. I'll miss him next fall. Don't let anyone tell you that he can't go hard and fast for two or three hours in any game," said Robertson. "He is a big fellow even if he looks like a shrimp. He is strong and strong. He doesn't seem to be hitting the ball hard but it travels far. You watch it."

The Crackers, meanwhile, are arousing the city to new enthusiasm. After winning six out of eight games last week they have won two in a row to start off the present week, both games having been won from their arch foes, the Lookouts. It was the Chattanooga club which won five straight games from the Crackers to start the season. The Crackers lost eight games to them before they won one. Since that time they have won

Kamm Is Benched In White Sox Shift

CHICAGO, June 10.—(AP)—Willie Kamm, who led American league third basemen in fielding in 1928 and 1929, has been benched by Manager Donie Bush, of the White Sox.

Kamm has failed to get started this season and was included in a wholesale shift which sent Irving Jeffries to third base, Smed Jolley from right field to left, Carl Reynolds to right and Johnny Watson to center, in an effort to add punch to the Sox attack.

SHORT TO THIRD.

Ruster Chatman, new Brave third baseman in fielding in 1928 and 1929, has been benched by Manager Donie Bush, of the White Sox.

OLDHAM HOLDS CHATTANOOGA TO NINE HITS

Dobbs' Boys Battle 10 Innings for Fourth Straight Victory.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 10. Bill Rodgers made drastic changes in his lineup today. He pulled out a pair of fly chasers and put in an infielder and a catcher. Walter Dashiell returned to the keystone after a layoff of two weeks.

It made a big difference, but lacked just one run of making enough difference. Atlanta continued on its merry way, soaking the Lookouts for the third straight time, and taking six hits in the error. The defeat sent the Lookouts down to seventh place in the standing. Oh, yes, the score was 4 to 3.

NOT THE SAME.

As on Sunday it took 10 frames for the locals to fail. The guy who said it was the same old thing out at Engel stadium every day is all wet. Sometimes they lose in nine innings. Others in 10.

Wid Matthews was replaced in right field by Ray Treadaway, and Elliott Biglow decorated the bench while Cliff Bolton got a chance in left. There wasn't any one available to stick in center, so Frank Walker remained there.

Rosenthal, the pesky right-fielder of the Crackers, did the dirty work. He drove in the winning run in the tenth with a double to center. Sheehan had singled before him. He had brought Atlanta from behind in the eighth by hitting a three-bagger after Sheehan singled. Grimes brought him in. Dashiell and Rosenthal had quite a bit to do with this ball game.

For all frames Dixie Davis and Red Oldham served up a beautiful battle. They served it in fine style and with all the trimmings.

Oldham, who has been going great and the Lookouts went down, one-two-three in five of the 10 frames. The Lookouts were popping up all over the place. Dixie Davis was curving them silly and had Cracker bats waving wildly at his hopper. He whiffed five and the infielders were taking in many pop-ups.

Atlanta put the first one over. Carlyle led in the fourth with a double to left. Gooch booted Grimes' roller. Lamotte hit into a double play but Carlyle scored. Sunday and Monday that would have been just another day. But today that figure hanging on the scoreboard looked like a mountain. It was lonely out there right down to the last base of the Chattanooga team.

LOOKOUTS SURGE UP.

Then Chattanooga went ahead by a marker. Willie Dashiell started it with a great hit to center. Dixie Davis followed in succession. Previously, Walker forced Willie. Treadaway rolled to Grimes, who threw wild. Red Rosenthal was safe. Bolton got a clean single to right, Walker scoring and Freddie taking third. Shirley forced Cliff. Treadaway coming in.

Dixie took the Crackers in order in the seventh and the one-run margin for the Lookouts looked as big as the place. Dixie Davis was early part. Then the whole thing was blasted to bits in the eighth. Sheehan singled, Rosenthal tripled and Grimes singled in order, and Atlanta was in front.

The Lookouts tied it in the ninth, thanks to a lucky break. Gooch beat out a roller to short but Appling threw wild. Willie Dashiell was safe at second on a close play. Jones sacrificed him down and Eddie Kenniff singled to bring him in. Canale, who had been out, singled and Rosenthal's double. With two down in the last half Bolton doubled, but Cliff Dashiell struck out and the game was over.

WHY THEY PICK SHARKEY.
There is one definite reason why so many fighters and boxers have picked Sharkey to beat Schmeling, especially those who have seen both train. They know the importance of road work, rope-skipping and bag punching along training lines for a hard fight and they know that Schme-

It might be said that some of those who know about the German trouble with his ankle ligament are still betting on him in the belief that he will have enough transportation at hand for a 15-round fight, where he might not have had for four weeks of road work and rope skipping.

as he looked against Sekyra, Risko and Paulino, was, putting him on Sharkey—not because they figure that Sharkey has improved, but because they don't like Schmeling's training methods and his showing as a boxer, either upon attack or defense.

Almost every fighter, watching both camps, can't see how Sharke can blow up sufficiently to throw away a fight for which he has almost every winning weapon. Yet there are still enough Schmeling backers willing to gamble that he will have enough left for a 15-round assault.

GIVING HIS REASON.

"I like Schmeling," he said, "because I believe he will be O. K. for one fight. Also because I believe he is just the type to beat Sharkey—a cool, smart fellow who can make his chance count when it comes. When this comes I believe I will upset Sharkey's best method, which is boxing, just as others have in the past. I am sorry he cut out his road work and other forms of training for certain reasons, but I don't believe they will make any great route, for in other respects he is in as fine condition as any one can get.

"I will be smartness, coolness and a dangerous punch against a better boxer, more experienced and almost as hard a puncher who has been an in-and-outer in nearly every one of his fights for two or three years. I can overlook one blowup. I can't overlook three or four with any money riding on the outcome.

"I know there are elements in this fight that are uncertain on both sides. I know there are several details that will not break until the fight is on and these must remain guesses until that time. But I still like Schmeling and believe he can win. I know he is a better man than Heeney, Risko or Scott ever were.

"Maybe Jack is a changed man, as so many say. Maybe he has improved. But mental habits of that sort are not easy to break when one has become a veteran, which Sharkey is today."

THE BIG MAJORITY.

Most of those who have been at both training camps are still picking Sharkey—several to win by a wide margin, including a knock out.

be admitted that the majority of those picking the Boston entry are handing out their judgments on what they have seen the two men show through their work at Orangeburg and Endicott. There is no questioning the fact that if the fight is to be a carry-over from training camp form that Sharkey will win by a knockout inside of seven rounds. But Jack has carried little of his training camp form into several important ring debates.

It has been said in his behalf that this is the most important fight in his life. This is true. Yet his three chances to reach the final round for a shot at Tunney and the world's title must

If he had beaten Dempsey he would have faced Tunney in Chicago. If he had whipped Heeney decisively he would have faced Tunney a Heeney later on shaded Risko. If he had beaten Risko in his third trial start he would have been named for Tunney's final fight. Sharkey knew all this. So it could not have been that he took these three appearances any too lightly.

A NEW WAY.

The public has grown weary of fouls and wrangles. Just for a change it would appreciate one good, upstanding battle where there was thly out in naming a referee with enough brains and courage to handle any situation that might pop up. There must be a few such referees left.

Certainly the public doesn't want to see any repetition of the Sharkey-Scott affair with the various charges and counter-charges that followed in its wake.

Branch Rickey, of the Cards, is quoted as saying:

'Gallant Fox a Great Colt,' Enthuses Earl Sande After Triumphs

ROMPING WINS EASILY STAMP WITH QUALITY

Opponents Dizzy After Mile; 'Fox' Made Show of Victories.

By W. C. Vreeland.

NEW YORK, June 10.—'Gallant Fox is a great colt. I can say this now without any hesitations to my views regarding other fine colts such as Zev and Kpi Sazg. which I rode to victory in turf classics in other years.

"Before he started and won the Preakness and even after he landed that event after a long race, I wasn't willing to call him great because I was anxious to see how he would perform in the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont.

DOUBTS AT REST.
"But after his romping triumphs in these two races, all doubts regarding his quality faded from my mind like a nightmare. He just romped. He had his opponents dizzy at the end of a mile. They were dead on their feet. He came home alone without the slightest effort on his part."

Earl Sande, greatest of our jockeys in the last decade, was quivering with pleasure as he praised Gallant Fox. And there was some good reason for his joy. He had equaled the record of three victories won by Isaac Murphy, the "colored Archer" of other days.

No matter what fortune may have in store for Sande in the future, no matter how many races of note he may garner, the thrill of the Derby victory of Gallant Fox will live in his memory to the end of his days. All of his racing life he had been eager to equal that record. And Gallant Fox made his dream come true.

LIKES A ROUTE.
"The big thing I feel certain about regarding Gallant Fox," continued Sande, "is that he likes a route—that he is a distance colt. There may be some that can beat him a mile, say Whirlone. But I'm sure that he will carry on and go the real Derby route, one mile and a half, better than any three-year-old in the country. He gave me that assurance by the way he beat his horses, with scarcely an effort, after the first mile in the Kentucky Derby."

"Yes," I replied, "but the last quarter of a mile was merely a tiddler. Any colt that has the slightest pretense to class could have come home the way he did."

"It wasn't the fault of Gallant Fox," replied Earl, "if his opponents were staggering and ready to drop at the end of seven furlongs. The pace had been fast. He endured—he kept on. He was ready to meet a challenge. When I found he had his opponents beaten to a frazzle I eased him up to a canter."

"What about the stories that he is moody—that he sulks in his trials?" "He never sulks with me," said the noted jockey. "Every time I have been on his back he has been willing to give of his best. I never rode a horse that responded so quickly to my orders."

"He never sulks with me," said the noted jockey. "Every time I have been on his back he has been willing to give of his best. I never rode a horse that responded so quickly to my orders."

CALLS FOX GREAT.
"That's why I say he's great. Not many colts would have fought his way out of trouble as he did in the Preakness. He obeyed my slightest touch on the reins. And when I asked him to go after the leaders, this after being hit and knocked about, he gave me the best that was in him."

"I have been engaged to ride him in all of his races during the remainder of the season. I couldn't have asked for a better mount in the Belmont. I have had considerable success in the Withers. Since 1923 I have won it four times with Zev, Bracdale, Haate and Chance Shot. I lead all other jockeys for this event. Jimmy McLaughlin rode three winners, Forester, George Kinney and Hanover."

"I have ridden five winners of the Belmont since 1921—Grey Lag, Zev, Mad Play, Chance Shot and 'The Fox.' But that record doesn't compare with that held by Jimmy McLaughlin. He rode six winners in two clusters. He topped everybody. His first trio of victories began in 1922. They were Forester, George Kinney and Panique. In 1926 he resumed with Inspector B, followed by Hanover and Sir Dixie. I stand second on the list."

METHOD—KINDNESS.
And then I had a talk with "Sunny Jim," the man who developed the speed of Gallant Fox and brought out all the stamina that he possesses. Fitz had the son of Sir Galahad 3rd—Marguerite sent to him from Belair Stud Farm, located on the outskirts of the Bowie race track, in the fall of 1928. He was then a

Throwing Rocks Around Farm Gave Him
Pitching Motion He Never Lost.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, one of baseball's most famous figures, is all through as a big leaguer after 19 spectacular years of service. Now, at 43, the veteran pitcher has received his unconditional release from the Phillies, with whom he began his big league playing days. In a series of ten articles, of which this is the first, Alexander is writing the refreshingly candid story of his baseball career.

By Grover Cleveland Alexander.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 10.—I have always considered St. Paul, Neb., my home, having played baseball around there as a youth and having had a home there most of my life. But actually I was born on a farm close to Elba, which is about eight miles from that town. The date of my birth was February 26, 1887.

In my boyhood those eight miles seemed quite a journey. I remember that when the circus came to St. Paul we had to get up early in the morning if we wanted to get there in time to see it. The old horse and buggy were sure but slow. Today you can call up a friend and say you will be over to see him in 20 minutes, and keep the appointment.

Around the farm I was always throwing things, and usually throwing at something else. I was continually being scolded by my mother for coming home with holes in my pockets, worn by rocks. For whenever I found a nice stone I put it in my pocket and carried it around until I found something to throw at.

I threw then with the same motion I have always used, the one that came natural to me. I threw side-arm, mostly with my forearm, and even when I had a good, fast ball that was my motion. I believe this motion is one of the prime reasons I lasted as long as I did; because of it, pitching was never hard work for me.

Grover Alexander May Go to Dallas

DALLAS, Texas, June 10.—(AP)

The Dallas club of the Texas league is negotiating for the services of Grover Cleveland Alexander, major league star pitcher for 19 years. Bob Tartelet, business manager of the club, said tonight.

Tartelet said he had wired Alexander, and that Alexander's reply "indicated he was interested." If he comes to Dallas, Tartelet said, "he'll probably have the distinction of being the highest salaried pitcher in Texas league history."

Brown Perfected Slow Ball for Foes

Clint Brown, young pitcher of the Indians, has been using a slow ball quite regularly this year and players who have batted against him say he has almost perfect control of it.

This same pitcher, a right-hander, was known as a speed ball pitcher just a few years back.

yearling. And from the time that Fitz first looked at the colt he has always been a favorite with him.

Let me say on behalf of the kind-hearted method Fitz pursues that he has always treated Gallant Fox kindly. He told me this but he wouldn't say it so that he could be quoted.

"Gentle and kind to every horse," Fitz expects obedience. If he finds a colt or filly that possesses a nasty temper he'll try every which way without using force to make the youngster understand that he must obey. But if the colt or filly, as the case may be, is stubborn then Fitz doesn't mind using the whip once or twice—nothing to bring him over her into line with his views.

But with Gallant Fox it was not necessary to sting him with a whip. He found that the colt was inclined to loaf and to fool around, but that was all. At no time was he vicious or inclined to be headstrong. Accordingly he used the method that many mothers do with sulky children. He petted him and pampered him till he felt like doing what Fitz wanted him to do.

NOT SULKY.
"What's all this talk about Gallant Fox being moody and sulky?" said Fitz to me. "It isn't so. He hasn't the slightest trace of temper. Sometimes he doesn't feel just like giving all of his speed in a trial and he loafs. But I wouldn't call that sulkiness or an exhibition of temper. He isn't like that."

"Gallant Fox has a mind of his own. He wants to do things his own way—and as he feels like doing. That's why he will look around and observe things that are unusual and which attract his attention. It indicates that he is alert—that he is bright. A dumb horse is one that won't pay the slightest attention to anything."

"Will I start him in the Belmont? Why not? Now that he is home from Kentucky he is ready to keep his engagements. A thoroughbred has but one mission in life—to race. As long as he is well and is not lame a race horse is better off racing than resting. He will start in the Belmont on Saturday unless he meets with a mishap or is prevented by sickness."

And then I had a talk with "Sunny Jim," the man who developed the speed of Gallant Fox and brought out all the stamina that he possesses. Fitz had the son of Sir Galahad 3rd—Marguerite sent to him from Belair Stud Farm, located on the outskirts of the Bowie race track, in the fall of 1928. He was then a

Pitcher a Yankee, Victories Cancelled

BOSTON, June 10.—(AP)

The signing of Vito Tanuli, 10-year-old pitcher on the Boston English High school team, by the New York Yankees, led to the cancellation today of three of the team's 13 consecutive victories by Headmaster Walter F. Downey.

Tanuli, who has pitched in ten of the games, admitted today that his widowed mother signed him to a Yankee contract on May 17. Since that date he pitched and won against the teams of the Boston Latin, Boston Trade and St. James High school of Haverhill, all of which have been cancelled.

The high school boy, who has had an average of 14 strikeouts a game, will not report to the major league club until his school closes on June 20. He has been told he will be placed with the Chambersburg, Va., team in the Blue Ridge league. He said he planned to return to high school next September for his senior year.

ON CITY DUMP.
The most striking incident I recall about that season occurred at Troy, where the diamond had been made on what was formerly the city dump. Left field was built out over the Hudson river and was supported by a wooden frame under the sod. One day there our left fielder, Wooten, backed up for a fly ball and just as he was about to make the catch the frame gave way and he fell into the river. One minute he disappeared, the next he was coming up out of the water. The batter got a home run, of course. It was the city dump, don't forget. For on another occasion a player slid into second base and came up with a horse shoe hanging to his belt. I had a good year at Syracuse and won 29 games, losing 14. At the end of the season Indianapolis neglected to exercise its option on me, or didn't care enough about me to do it, and I was drafted by the Philadelphia National league club—the Phillies. Tomorrow: Alexander's debut in the majors.

DOUBLE CEREMONY IN DRUID HILLS BAPTIST CHURCH

Weddings Again Feature Wednesday Social Calendar

Today's calendar again shows a decided preference for brides, and why not? This is the one month in the entire year that belongs to them, although sometimes they do usurp others. Heading the weddings today comes the ceremony of Miss Mildred Pairo and Robert G. Brown, which will be solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Louise Prescott Pairo, on Peachtree street.

An unusual affair will be the double wedding of Miss Claire Carswell to Nathaniel C. Hughes and Miss Bernice Langenfield to J. Innes Subers, which takes place at 8:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Baptist church. Miss Virginia Deadwyler will become the bride of Charles P. Bagley, of DeSoto, at 5:30 o'clock at the Peachtree Christian church.

Another home ceremony will be the wedding of Miss Gladys West and Walter Stephen Allen at 5:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Paul V. West, on Moreland avenue.

An out-of-town marriage which will prove of interest to Atlantans is that of Miss Myrtle M. Fuller, of Macon, and Thomas M. Williams, of Pittsburgh and formerly of Atlanta, which takes place at 9 o'clock this evening at the home of the bride's parents in Macon.

Many attractive luncheons, bridge parties, teas and dinners fill the remainder of the calendar and most of them are honoring brides-elect of this month.

School of Oratory Continues Recitals.

The second of a series of summer recitals to be given by the Atlanta School of Oratory and Expression, 402 Wesley Memorial Church building, will be rendered in the studios of the school Thursday morning, June 12, at 11 o'clock. Among those taking part will be Mrs. Grace Wheeler in monologues and narrative readings; Miss Susie Walton, of Florida, in a dramatic scene; Miss Luna Stunt in story-telling for Sunday schools; Miss Lucy Darden in stories for day schools. The children's department will be represented by Master Ovid Bush in declamation and extemporaneous speaking; Loris McLaurin, in humorous readings, and Frank Peavey in declamations and story. Jackie Illmer Stearns will read "My Mother." Dr. Watson, the president, will show the difference between oral and silent reading and the educational value of each. Teachers and the public are invited.

Hugh Hodgson Conducts Contest.

Hugh Hodgson, eminent pianist and teacher, conducted an interesting contest for the pupils of his artist pupils in his studio in the Erlanger Theater building Monday afternoon. The contestants were children ranging from the age of 8 to 14 years, pupils from the studios of Miss Irene Leffew, Mrs. J. K. Douglas, and Miss Mozelle Horton, all of whom are artist pupils of Mr. Hodgson. Each child played a short minuet, and a Mozart minuet and a third piece of their own selection. Each player did outstanding work and the contest was conceded to be extremely close. Marked ability and talent were shown in each young player, and each played with ease and poise that was notable. The first prize went to Miss Gladys Hill.

Those taking part in the competition were Frank Carter, Euland Gary, Misses Maggie Louise Blake, Gladys Hill, Camille Hugley, Virginia Morris, Jane Rogers, Kathryn Sweeney and Sarah Thurman. The children participated in a theoretical and ear-training test, of which Euland Gary was the winner. These contests, which are given by Mr. Hodgson each year, stimulate much musical interest and enthusiasm among the younger musicians.

Miss Echols And Mr. Hardigree Are Wedded

The marriage of Miss Florence Ruth Echols and W. W. Hardigree were solemnized last evening at 8 o'clock at the Capitol View Baptist church, Rev. W. Lee Cutts, pastor of the church, officiating.

Mrs. Eugene Ethridge was her sister's only attendant and she wore a frock of flesh-colored crepe trimmed with white lace and folds of self material. She wore a bride's veil and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Paul Maddox attended the bridegroom as best man.

The bride wore an ensemble of aquamarine blue with a beige yoke. Her blue straw hat was trimmed with beige lace and other accessories were in the beige shade. She carried an arm bouquet of white roses.

Immediately following the ceremony the couple left for a motor trip to points in Florida, and upon their return, about June 16, they will make their home at 910 Drewry street.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Echols, of Macon, members of an old pioneer family of Georgia. She graduated from Wadley high school, in Wadley, and for the past few years has been making her home in Atlanta with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ethridge, of 1440 Hartford avenue.

Mr. Hardigree is the son of Mrs. R. A. Conley, of 112 Georgia avenue, and has lived in Atlanta most of his life. He attended the public schools of Atlanta and business college and is now in the real estate business.

Linen Shower For Bride-Elect.

Miss Evalyn Milner, attractive bride-elect of this month, was honored guest Wednesday afternoon at a linen shower at which Miss Sara Milner was hostess at her home on Piedmont avenue.

Many unusual contests were enjoyed, after which the lovely linens were presented. Assisting in entertaining was Mrs. W. T. Milner.

A lovely affair given for Miss Evalyn Milner, bride-elect of June, was the bridge party at which Miss Carolyn Crawford was hostess at her home on Highland avenue.

Miss Hopson Presents Pupils.

Miss Elizabeth Hopson, of the faculty of the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, will present a group from her class in piano in a recital this evening at 8:30 o'clock at Cable Hall. The public is invited. The program will include solos, duets, and two-piano compositions. Cowan performed the impressive rite ceremony in the presence of only the immediate families and close friends. The home was effectively decorated in cut flowers.

Preceding the ceremony Mrs. C. H. Knox sang "I Love You Truly." To the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" Miss Myrtice Souther, maid of honor and sister of the bride, and Robert Knox, best man, preceded the bride and groom, who entered together. The maid of honor wore with her costume of blue chiffon a shoulder bouquet of sweet peas and lilies of the valley. "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life" was played very softly during the ceremony.

The bride was lovely in a becoming ensemble of rose beige lace with a close-fitting hat of the same shade and accessories to match. She carried a bouquet of sunset roses and valley lilies.

Miss Mary Ruth Moore Becomes Bride of George Tyler Bird

The marriage of Miss Mary Ruth Moore and George Tyler Bird was solemnized at the North Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday at 4:30 o'clock with Dr. Richard Orme Flinn, pastor of the church, performing the ceremony.

Miss Emilee Parmalee, organist of the church, rendered the following program of spiritual music: "To the Rising Sun," by Torjussen; "The Swan," by Saint-Saens; "Still as the Night," by Bohm, and "Swedish Wedding March," by Soderstrom. Mrs. Herbert Z. Hopkins, sister of the groom, sang "At Dawning" by Cadman and "Beloved, It Is Morn," by Arlyn. During the ceremony "To a Wild Rose" by MacDowell, was played. The bridal chorus from "Lo-hengrin," by Wagner, was used as a processional and Mendelssohn's Wedding March as the recessional.

The ushers were Dr. Marion McEl-Hull, J. R. Whitman, James Mor-ton and Edward C. Hammond. The maid-of-honor, Miss Adele Bird, sister of the groom, wore a gown of pink chiffon made old-fashioned with a picture hat to match. Her flowers were an old-fashioned shower bouquet of Dresden shaded flowers.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Robert Clark Moore, was met at the altar by the bridegroom and his best man, Robert Dennis Trammell. She was gowned in a model of French blue chiffon and wore a picture hat with eggshell horse-hair braid. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of white roses and valley lilies.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Kirby Moore and the late Mr. Moore, of Piedmont avenue. The family moved to Atlanta about 10 years ago from Cleveland, Ohio. She graduated from Girls' High school and for the past three years has been secretary to Doctor Flinn, at the North Avenue Presbyterian church.

Mr. Bird is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Bird, of Morningside drive, formerly of Canada. He graduated from Georgia Tech and was a member of the Phi Kappa Phi honorary fraternity. Later he took a course in electrical engineering with the General Electric Company at Lynn, Mass., and Schenectady, N. Y. He is now a member of the firm of Bird-Potts Company, of Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. Bird left immediately after the ceremony for a trip to New York and Boston by boat. Upon their return they will make their home at 965 Ponce de Leon avenue, N. E.

O. K.'S PENSION BILL

Measure for World War Veterans Adds 70 Millions Annually.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(UN)—A $70,000,000 a year increase in government compensation for World War veterans was approved today by the senate finance committee, which voted a favorable report on the amended bill already passed by the house. The action virtually assured senate action on the bill and made likely another conflict with President Hoover similar to the controversy over Spanish-American war pensions.

The president may be able to kill the bill by veto, due to the fact that congress may have adjourned by the time it is taken up and passed. Both houses overrode his veto of the $11,000,000 Spanish war pension increase. The World War bill provides for $25 additional for all battle casualties, and for $8 a month to hospitalized veterans who are unable to show their service record, with additional amounts if they have dependents. The major increased expenses are in moving up from January 1, 1925, to January 1, 1930, the date on which disabilities found are presumed to have been caused by World War service.

Another change is that veterans could file application for compensation any time, whereas under present law none could be filed after April 6, 1930.

Suspect Identified In Old Kidnaping

NEW YORK, June 10.—(AP)—A brother of 10-year-old Grace Budd, kidnaped two years ago from her Manhattan home, today tentatively identified Charles Howard, 40, brought back from Florida on a grand larceny charge, as his sister's kidnaper.

Edward Budd, 19, picked Howard out of a line-up of prisoners today. "He looks very much like the man," he said. Mrs. Budd failed to recognize Howard as the kidnaper.

The little girl, for whom a nationwide search has been conducted, was taken from her home by a man giving the name of Frank Howard, who said he was a farmer of Farmington, N. J. He was only a casual acquaintance of the family.

The search recently was conducted in New Hampshire, after Mrs. Budd received a letter apparently from her daughter, and bearing a New Hampshire postmark.

Charles Howard, who is accused of stealing $5,800 from his bride of eight days and her mother, told police he knew nothing of the kidnaping.

DOC WATERS CAME DOWN TO OUR CLUBHOUSE ON THE OTHER BANK LAST NIGHT WHILE WE WERE HOLDING OUR REGULAR SINGING PRACTICE. ALL OF A SUDDEN THE DOOR BURST OPEN AND IN RUSHED HERMAN—OUR NEWEST MEMBER. HE WAS ALL EXCITED.

HE RAN QUICKLY UP TO ME. HE WAS CARRYING HIS BAG OF FIDDLE. UNDER HIS ARM AND WHEN HE TOOK IT IN SHAKING HANDS AND HELD OUT TO ME. IN HIS EYES I SAW A LOOK OF FEAR, AND I KNEW HE HAD BEEN CHASED.

I DON'T KNOW WHY HE WANTS ME TO KEEP THIS FIDDLE FOR HIM.

SOMEONE MUST HAVE BEEN TRYING TO TAKE IT AWAY FROM HIM.

GOOD HEAVEN! WHAT'S THAT?

AND THEN SUDDENLY WE TURNED AT A SOUND FROM THE WINDOW. A FRIGHTFUL FACE GLARED AT US THROUGH THE GRIMY WINDOW PANE—AN EVIL GLARE THAT FROZE MY VERY BLOOD—AND I GAVE A STARTLED CRY AND DROPPED THE FIDDLEBOX!

G'BYE TILL TOMORROW. Jack

Doc Waters came down to our clubhouse on the other bank last night while we were holding our regular singing practice. All of a sudden the door burst open and in rushed Herman—our newest member. He was all excited.

He ran quickly up to me. He was carrying his bag of fiddle under his arm and when he took it in shaking hands and held out to me. In his eyes I saw a look of fear, and I knew he had been chased.

I don't know why he wants me to keep this fiddle for him.

Someone must have been trying to take it away from him.

Good heaven! What's that?

G'BYE TILL TOMORROW. Jack

Doc Waters came down to our clubhouse on the other bank last night while we were holding our regular singing practice. All of a sudden the door burst open and in rushed Herman—our newest member. He was all excited.

He ran quickly up to me. He was carrying his bag of fiddle under his arm and when he took it in shaking hands and held out to me. In his eyes I saw a look of fear, and I knew he had been chased.

I don't know why he wants me to keep this fiddle for him.

Someone must have been trying to take it away from him.

Good heaven! What's that?

And then suddenly we turned at a sound from the window. A frightful face glared at us through the grimy window pane—an evil glare that froze my very blood—and I gave a startled cry and dropped the fiddlebox!

Miss Hanye Weds Mr. Floyd At Moore Memorial Church

The marriage of Miss Julia Lucille Hanye, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Hanye, and John Monroe Floyd, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Floyd, of Nichols, S. C., was beautifully solemnized Sunday at 4 o'clock at Moore Memorial Presbyterian church, on Luckie street. The Rev. E. F. Carson and Rev. J. Russell Young performed the ceremony before a large gathering of friends and relatives. Preceding and during the ceremony Hubert Allen rendered an appropriate program of music. The selections were "Ave Maria," "Evening Star," from "Tannhauser," and "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life." Mr. Allen was accompanied by Mrs. Russell Young, violinist, and Ewell Allen sang "I Love You Truly" and "At Dawning," while "The Indian Love Call" was rendered during the ceremony.

Bridal Party.
Fletcher Marshall and Fletcher Quillen were ushers. The bridesmaids were Misses Pauline Hanye and Ruby Hanye, sisters of the bride, who lit the candles. Miss Ruby Hanye's gown was of white tulle and Miss Pauline Hanye wore peach color. Miss Alice Hanye, groomed in yellow crepe, entered with Homer Norman, Miss Gertrude Hanye, in green crepe, and Miss Gertrude Hanye, in green crepe, entered with George Rosell, of Memphis, Tenn. The maid of honor was Miss Irene Hanye, who entered with Mr. Gertrude Hanye, of Cincinnati, Ohio. The maid of honor wore pink crepe and the matron of honor was groomed in green crepe. All of the attendants' gowns were made alike and featured a long waistline with uneven hemline. Their flowers were pink roses, which were carried in silver vases. Tulle to match the bride's dress was used on each bouquet, and the torchbearers carried pink torches to light the candles.

The lovely bride, given in marriage by her father, Mr. Hanye, was met by the groom and best man, Wilfred Enzor, at the altar. She was radiantly beautiful in her gown of white satin, which was trimmed with the full flaring skirt forming the neckline of the bodice, and the veil was of rose point lace which enveloped her figure, and was caught to her dark wavy hair in cap shape arrangement by sprays of orange blossoms. She carried calla lilies, and her only ornament was a coral brooch which was brought to this country by her great-grandmother, the late Mrs. Wilhelm Krug, of Augusta. The bride's gifts to her attendants were sunburst pendants. The groom's gifts to the groomsmen were country. Mrs. Hanye, mother of the bride, was groomed in Alice blue chiffon and her hat matched her gown. Her corsage was a bouquet of pink Ophelia roses showered with valley lilies.

Reception Follows.
Following the ceremony the bride's parents were hosts at a reception at their home on Calhoun street. The guests included immediate friends of the two families. The living room and dining room were handsomely decorated with pink roses, gladioli, nasturtiums and pansies. On the bride's table was a tablecloth that was given to her mother as a wedding present and came from her country. The bride's cake and silver candlesticks, a gift to the bride and groom, were the only ornaments on the table.

Miss Biggers and Harry Glore Wed at West End Baptist Church

The marriage of Miss Isabel Biggers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Biggers, to Harry E. Glore was beautifully solemnized last evening at the West End Baptist church. The Rev. M. A. Cooper, pastor, performed the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends.

An interesting program of nuptial music was rendered. On an Italian violin 150 years old, which belongs to the bride, Miss Christina Burger played Schubert's Serenade and "Hearts and Flowers." Miss Pollie Barton, accompanied at the organ by Miss Helen Schard, sang "I Love You Truly" and "All for You."

The bridesmaids were Ashley Chambers, Frank Bailey, Milton Harris and Hugh Terrell. The maid of honor was Mrs. E. L. Glore, Frank Doyle, the groom's best man. The bride and groom were accompanied by Mrs. E. L. Glore, Frank Doyle, the groom's best man. The bride and groom were accompanied by Mrs. E. L. Glore, Frank Doyle, the groom's best man.

PASSION FLOWER

By Kathleen Norris

Thirty-Third Installment.

The minutes began to whel by, and were hours. Dan thought, as they slowly passed, that Cassy was like the hub of a wheel, and all of them, the others, nurses, doctors, her mother, even the little invalid himself, were merely the spokes. She held them all in that quiet grip of hers, that was typified by her hold on the brown, bloody little hands.

Tommy dozed, roused, talked animatedly, dozed again.

"Weaker," the nurse said to Cassy, bending over to wipe his mouth with a bit of cotton.

"He's had no dinner," Cassy responded resolutely.

Outside of the old farmhouse in the dark, rain fell spattering; gutters dripped. Now and then an especially vicious onslaught shook the building. But through it all the lamp burned softly on, untroubled, and the thin brown hands held steadily the little boy's hands that were varnished with dull vermilion.

Dan found himself in the kitchen, which was as brightly lighted, as hot and unnatural as before.

The clock over Inga's sink said twenty-three minutes to four. One of the doctors was having coffee and toast; Mrs. Pringle was sitting opposite him, but she was not eating.

"Almost twelve hours of it," Dan said, sitting down.

"Yes, yes," the doctor agreed gravely. "The little boy has tremendous resistance."

"Will you have a cup of coffee?" an unknown woman asked gently.

"No, thanks, nothing," the doctor commented sympathetically.

Dan glanced his elbow on the table. His eyes, haggard in his handsome young face, stared straight into those of the other man.

"No chance," he asked steadily.

"No, no, I'm afraid not," Doctor Williams thinks this might go on for another twenty-four hours. But I don't believe it. There is a decided weakening," the doctor answered.

A few minutes later, back in the sickroom, he whispered to Cassy: "Could I bring you some coffee?"

"Hot milk," she answered, in her sensible, natural voice. Dan felt in his heart an upsurge of absolute adoration for this brown, quiet woman with the shining, mystical blue eyes, and the blood-coated hands. She was saving them all that she could; she would save them, to the very end.

When he noiselessly returned, in a hand, the hot glass, she loosened one of her hands for the first time, to steady it while she drank. Tommy watched.

Cassy's glance instantly moved to the doctor's face.

"I wouldn't advise any nourishment," he said, in a low voice. "It couldn't do any harm, but I shouldn't advise it."

"But it wouldn't do any harm?"

"No—"

"Get me a silver dessert spoon, Nurse," Cassy directed. "I'm going to feed you as if you were a baby, Tom."

They watched her. Tommy's eyes following the spoon gratefully, as the few warm drops trickled into his eager little mouth. He tired of it, and she stopped instantly.

"How often may I do that, Doctor?"

"Well, as often as he likes, certainly."

"Dan importuned her anxiously: "Cassy, it's 4 o'clock. Won't you go rest?"

"Yes," she agreed, after a second's frowning thought. "But you'll be here, Dan," she asked.

She came back more than an hour later, with a red spot on her cheek, like that on the face of a child who sleeps—motionless and deep. And as she took her place beside the sleeping child again, Dan got her first weary, encouraging smile—Cassy's old, gallant smile, the smile she had given him on that blazing night when this child was born.

Then it was his turn to go to the kitchen, to eat and drink whatever the women put before him. The rain had stopped now. The clock behind him struck 6.

He went out. The dooryard was filled with great puddles, the trees were still heavy with rain.

But toward the east, behind the little rise of ground where the barns and windmill stood, the sky was turning opal, and great masses of dark cloud, tipped with watery pink, were moving away in drifts that were black against the brightness beyond.

Strangely, the householder's quiet pride suddenly arose within him. These were his cares, this was his spreading farm of bare fruit trees, and newly turned fields; these were his barns and sheds and fences, his cattle just filing down from the pasture.

And this was his home behind him. It was his little daughter who was upstairs asleep now; his little gallant brown boy who was fighting for life in the old playroom. And above all, it was his girl—his sweetheart—who was in there, beside that couch, fighting for her first-born with all the force of her own great soul.

She belonged to him, forever and forever. He wanted—he needed—nobody else.

Suddenly she stood beside him: Cassy, in a gray wrapper like the old wrapper of long ago. Dan turned quickly, pale, but she shook her head.

"No—just the same. They sent me out for a breath of air."

He put his arm about her, the pale, broken, burdened woman who was infinitely dearer in this strange moment of dawn than ever she had been to him in her girlhood, and they looked at the brightening world together. Dan, exhausted, shamed, sick in every fiber of his being with remorse, still felt himself strangely purified in soul, felt the birth of something new within him.

"Isn't it all like a dream, Dan?" Cassy said, after a silence. "You coming into our library, in the old house in the Mission, so long ago, and our running that night—"

"Remember the night I was so wretched, before Tom came, and your buying me a hot-water bottle, and making me tea?" The most delicious tea I ever tasted—

"You'll never know what Tom's been to me, during these three years. He's been more than a child, Dan. He's seemed to understand me—"

Dan looked at her, with the sunrise shining in her tired face, and his love for her, his need of her, shook him like terror. To have his wife leaning against him again, to have her fingers tightly holding his, was more than he could bear.

Tears came into his eyes, and he said: "Cassy, what can I do?" She did not answer.

"Everything you've ever thought of me," he began after a pause, "everything you've ever known about me—I see now. I want you to know it. I want you to know that I despise myself—that I could kill myself, except that it would hurt you. You'd pity me, Cassy, if you could have looked into my soul, this last hour, out here alone, and realize what I've been feeling. You couldn't despise me more than I despise myself."

"I don't despise you, Dan," she said, trembling.

"I've lost. Maybe there isn't any other hell than that."

"I've spoiled it all," Dan went on. "But I want you to know that I love you—the way you might have wanted me, to once. You're in my mind and my soul all the time, Cassy. There isn't an instant of the old days that I don't remember."

"Nor I," she said, in the silence. "I think all the time of working my way back—to you and the kids and the kitchen—I don't mean hurting any one, breaking anything up."

He floundered, and she said quietly: "No, we've had enough of that."

"But some day, mightn't we be back together, Cassy? Mightn't there be some way?"

"Oh, Danny, if there might be! I get so lonesome, all alone!"

For one moment her beloved dark head was against his shoulder, in the old way, and then their cheeks were together.

Then Cassy, suddenly resuming her usual quiet, restrained air, said that she must go into Tommy again.

They were turning toward the kitchen door when a woman came quickly and quietly about the house, a pretty woman, warmly furred, with a look of deep concern upon her handsome face.

2,000,000-Share Turnover New Experience for the Year

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER.
Associated Press Financial Editor.
NEW YORK, June 10.—(P)—The curb market was subjected to further wholesale selling early in today's session, but the expected technical rally appeared during the afternoon, as the overextended short interest hastened to cover, piling up total sales in excess of 2,000,000 shares for the first time this year.

It was notable that the recovery was concentrated in the utility group, particularly in the utility group, and in those issues in which there is an adequate loaning supply, indicating that the recovery represented little more than short covering. Large supporting orders appeared, however, as sponsors of these issues were apparently unwilling to see them sharply decline at a time when several merger developments are under consideration.

Such issues as Electric Bond & Share, American Gas & Electric, American Superpower, United Light & Heat, Hydroelectric and Brillian, rallied 2 to 5 points. Less active issues, however, such as Cleveland Electric and Associated Gas, both of which touched new 1935 lows, failed to participate in the late rebound.

Few of the industrials made marked recovery, although United Fruit of Colombia edged about 5 and 4 units respectively. Technicolor rebounded about 7. Columbia Pictures edged 3 and 4. Air Liquide 10 points. In the oil group, Humble and Esso recovered a point or two.

Several of the investment trusts continued heavy, although Goldman Sachs rallied 2 points, after establishing a new low at 25 1/4. Transamerica dropped about 4 points, reaching new low ground at 10 1/4. Securities Corporation general new stock tumbled nearly 6 points to a new minimum.

JUSTICE DEPARTMENT TAKES EYES OFF REDS

Insufficient Laws and Funds Said by Hoover To Be the Cause.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—(AP)—The justice department today suspended its work of watching the activities of communists in this country in 1934 because of inadequacy of laws and funds was made today before the special house committee investigating communists by J. Edgar Hoover, director of investigation.

The committee party of America has organized a special committee to incite revolutionary activities among the negroes and to send selected negroes to Moscow for communist training for world revolution.

Hoover was the second witness in the inquiry begun yesterday when the Rev. Father Edmund Walsh, of Georgetown University, charged the Soviet Russian government with a violation of the neutrality laws.

Fish added Hoover explained how the justice department on communists in this country.

In a statement, Fish said, the witness "demonstrated the direct control of the third international, with headquarters in Moscow, by the communist party of America and reported the discussions in Moscow by the working committees of the Third International."

Chicago Leader Of Trade Board Outlines Policy

CHICAGO, June 10.—(AP)—The Chicago Board of Trade, open today for the first time since its new 44-story home in LaSalle street, was described by its president, John A. Bunnell, last night as "a year round steady market for the products of the soil and of man, guaranteeing to everyone fair treatment and honest dealing."

The opening ceremonies of the new board, he said, the grain marketing center in the world wound up with a banquet addressed by President Bunnell and Silas H. Strawn, diplomat and civic leader.

"The problems of marketing cannot be solved by the stroke of a pen," President Bunnell said. "The law of supply and demand is still working, and is always bound in the end to rule."

Tracing the 82-year-old history of the board, he said, the grain merchants had tried to establish a central market where farmers could get fair prices, with the merchants profiting from the difference.

Radicals have found it possible to attack the operation of institutions like the board of trade to gain a following among the people, he said, and to use the board as a tool for their ends.

"I have often wished," Mr. Strawn said, "that the board could be used to deport those creatures who have happened to be born here—I do not think citizens because they never rise above the level of their environment, those parasites who, while enjoying the luxuries and liberty that generally have come to them by the sweat of their ancestors, complain about conditions here instead of doing something constructive for their country."

There were indications of a time coming when the most fertile brains would not be engaged in attempts to strangle big business, he said, but in devising ways to control and regulate large industries that supply the wants of the nation.

Nineteen Texans Enter Gubernatorial Race

AUSTIN, Texas, June 10.—(AP)—A field of 19 candidates for governor of Texas, today were certified for the July 20 primaries as the result of state committee meetings marked by republican harmony and verbal combat.

Fourteen of the candidates are republicans, five democrats.

Governor Dan Moody, refusing to be a candidate, and James E. Ferguson, removed as chief executive by impeachment, enlivened the democratic committee meeting yesterday by a heated exchange of words.

Ferguson, who was impeached, had named his wife, Miriam A. Ferguson, also a former chief executive, to do family honors as a candidate. The tilt developed when Governor Moody expressed his opinion that Ferguson, "running under his wife's petticoats," would not be nominated.

Hoover democrats came in for a share of criticism through attacks on the party's record. Ferguson, however, by resolution all white democrats were invited to participate in the primary.

A certified five candidates and a complete slate, expressing high hopes for another victory. H. E. Hump, Amarillo ranchman, and Dr. R. B. Rutledge, of Austin, received the largest number of votes ever cast for a republican candidate for governor in Texas against Mrs. Ferguson in 1924, were drafted.

Air Lines Hike Passenger Fares

TULSA, Okla., June 10.—(AP)—Larry Fritz, operations manager of the Tulsa-based Air Express, said today that all major air lines probably would increase passenger fares to seven cents a mile within the next two weeks. Present fares are approximately five cents a mile.

The decision to increase the fares was reached at a recent conference in Washington of representatives of the major air lines, he said.

STORE OF ANTIQUITIES RECEIVED AT YALE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 10.—(AP)—Newly discovered antiquities part of the results of the Yale excavations during the past year at Doura-Europos, in Mesopotamia, have arrived at the University from Syria, and will be put on exhibition at the Yale Gallery of Fine Arts before commencement.

Doura, which is on the Euphrates, has been covered by the sand of the desert for over 2,200 years. Excavations in the city, an ancient Assyrian fortress, later replaced by a Macedonian military colony, have been going on for two years.

The season's work at Doura was most successful, the university announced today. Part of the Temple of Artemis, partially excavated previously by Professor F. Cumont, of the French Academy, has been uncovered, and beside it a Temple of Atargatis and Hadad. Atargatis was the Syrian Goddess of Fertility and Hadad the Syrian Sun God.

At the end of the season a division of the finds is made between the Syrian government and Yale.

Gil Demands Probe Of Plotting Charge

MEXICO CITY, June 10.—(AP)—Former President Emilio Portes Gil has sent a letter to President Ortiz Rubio asking for a full investigation into charges made by Luis Morones, former secretary of industry, commerce and labor, to the effect that Portes Gil while provisional president plotted in an attempt against the life of Ortiz Rubio in Los Angeles.

"I consider very grave Morones' charges that I headed a plot to take your life," Portes Gil said. "This idea, born in Morones' mind, puts me in the position of asking you to make a full investigation at all costs into the department of the interior, foreign relations and the consulate in Los Angeles as I want to show to my detractors his insincerity. I also hear that the railroad workers have published a statement to the effect that they agitated them to unrest as Morones charged."
